

Check-Signing Cramps Cured

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster County Clerk Carl Hartman has found a cure for the county commissioners' writers cramp.

Starting this week the commissioners will no longer have to sign 300 to 400 individual claims each week so businesses can be paid.

Instead the commissioners will sign their names on up to 25 computerized lists of claims each week, explained Hartman. The claims will be listed by fund, such as general fund, highway fund, revenue sharing, etc.

And for his end of the job, Hartman has the biggest stamp in the county. Each computerized list of claims will carry the five-inch stamp plus Hartman's signature before it is sent to the commissioners for approval.

The County Board members, tired of spending hours a week signing claims, had asked for an easier method. At first Hartman balked at the idea, fearing that any system might create more work for his staff and might be illegal.

The computerized listing has passed the legality test and involves little extra work.

But there probably will be another day or two lost between the time a business submits the claim and receives payment, Hartman said.

Commissioner Bob Colin, who had not heard the "good news" said that the new system "will give us a little more time to conduct our more important business."

Reagan, Ford In Tight Race

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — President Ford inched ahead of Republican challenger Ronald Reagan in their tight, tense contest in New Hampshire's leadoff presidential primary election. Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter strode past a crowded field to win the Democratic primary.

Ford said he expected to win in the end. Reagan said he had "far exceeded our expectations" by holding the President to a virtual stalemate.

And that's what it was, a 50-50 race.

"I feel what's happened tonight is a victory," Reagan told a post-midnight news conference. He said he didn't know whether it would be a moral victory or an outright one.

And, in a line that could be the slogan for winners and losers in the first of 31 presidential primaries, Reagan added:

"One primary does not a summer make."

While Carter and his supporters were rejoicing in victory, the Ford and Reagan camps were worrying through a slow count of the Republican vote.

With 67% of the anticipated vote tallied, Reagan had 40,418 votes to Ford's 40,201.

"It's the President's feeling that by the time all the votes are counted, he's confident he's going to win," said Press Secretary Ron Nessen.

Reagan's campaign manager, former Gov. Hugh Gregg, set his public target low, and said the GOP challenger was pleased at his showing, whoever the ultimate winner.

Among the Democrats, there was no doubt. Carter went before his cheering supporters in a Manchester hotel ballroom, flashed them a victory sign, and said he's going to win the Democratic presidential nomination on the first ballot.

Carter's closest challenger was Arizona Rep. Morris K. Udall, who was gaining about 23 per cent of the votes, and said his showing put him ahead of the liberal field. He congratulated Carter — and added that he'll see him again in Massachusetts, where Democrats vote next Tuesday.

Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh was taking 17 per cent, former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris 11 per cent and Sargent Shriver 9 per cent.

Bayh said he was gratified with his showing. "We're running a good strong third," he said. Harris said he had hoped to do better than his fourth-place showing. "Our problem is that the little people were not able to reach the vote levers," he joked. He said he expects to improve his showing in Massachusetts. A Shriver spokesman said much the same thing.

It was clear that Ford had fallen far short of the margin normally expected of an incumbent President. But Ford holds office by appointment, not election. And while the Reagan camp tried to hold him to the standard that made the late Lyndon B. Johnson a loser even in victory in New Hampshire eight years ago, Ford and his men said the narrowest of margins would satisfy them.

Howard H. Callaway, Ford's national campaign manager, said the President would eke out such a victory in "a dead heat, a very close race." He said that would be an important victory, calling New Hampshire Reagan's best state outside the South

But the tension was showing, too, with Ford managers saying that if they do lose, it will be because Richard M. Nixon chose to go to Peking and spring to public attention in the final days of the campaign.

Callaway said he had "rough evidence" that Ford lost campaign momentum because of Nixon.

Deputy Campaign Manager Stuart Spencer said it flatly. "If President Ford loses in New Hampshire, Richard Nixon will be the reason," he said. Nixon's re-emergence revived memories of Watergate and the pardon Ford granted his resigned predecessor.

But Reagan's manager Gregg, scoffed at that reasoning. "It never came up in the campaign," he said. "They're just looking for an excuse." On election eve, Gregg had said New Hampshire voters might well be thinking about Nixon, although they weren't talking about him.

Price Support Rates Boosted

Washington (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz Tuesday announced increases ranging from about 10 to 14% in 1976 price support rates for grains and cotton and reactivated a federal support program for soybeans.

The increases in supports included boosts in support target rates for grains and cotton which were mandated by law. In addition, Butz used his discretionary power to also order comparatively modest hikes in crop support loan rates.

The increases, which fell far short of boosts proposed by some farm groups, left the new support rates well below current and expected market prices for major commodities. For corn, which was selling at $2.44 a bushel in mid-January, the 1975 support target of $1.38 a bushel was raised to $1.57 for 1976, and last year's crop loan rate of $1.10 a bushel was boosted to $1.25.

Under farm law, the support program operates in two phases through the target prices and crop support loans.

The target prices, the first line of defense for farmers, serve to trigger direct government payments to growers if markets fall below the target level. In the second phase, growers are given the right to get crop support loans on their commodities, which serves to put a basic floor under markets since producers would not sell to commercial buyers for less than the loan rate.

Target prices were raised for 1976 under terms of a 1973 law which provided boosts beginning this year to take account of past increases in farm production costs.

For wheat, the 1975 target of $2.05 a bushel was raised to $2.29 a bushel, and last year's loan rate of $1.37 was raised to $1.50. For grain sorghums, the target price was raised from $1.31 a bushel to $1.49, and the loan rate went from $1.05 a bushel to $1.19.

For soybeans, which are not included in the target price system, the crop support loan was set at $2.50 a bushel compared with $2.25 in 1974, the last year in which that crop was supported. The program was eliminated last year on grounds it was not needed because market prices were far above supports, but Butz said he was restoring it this year because soybeans growers are facing increased competition from Brazilian soybeans and Asian palm oil.

Butz also announced the 1976 target support for cotton has been raised to 43.2 cents a pound compared with 38 cents last year. The cotton loan earlier had been raised to 37.12 cents a pound compared with 34.27 cents in 1975.

For barley, the target was raised to $1.28 a bushel compared with $1.13, and the loan was boosted from 90 cents a bushel to $1.02. For oats and rye, which get only loan protection, support rates were raised to 60 cents and $1 a bushel, respectively, compared with 54 cents and 50 cents last year.

Officials noted the increased target prices will also mean bigger disaster payments for grain and cotton farmers whose crops are destroyed or damaged by weather this year. Farm law provides such payments, based on a percentage of the target price, in cases where grain and cotton producers suffer "substantial" natural disaster losses.

Spokesmen also announced that interest rates on the crop support loans will remain at the current 7.5%. Farmers must pay this interest if they redeem crop loans to resell their crops, but also have the option of refueling the crop to the government with no interest.

'Problem Student' School Proposed

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Junior high students in trouble may get what Mickle Principal Jack Peterson described as "very much intensive care" by September, if the Lincoln Board of Education decides the public schools can afford a separate building providing alternative programs.

The board Tuesday night voted 5-0 to accept a year-long evaluation of junior high education, and directed administrators to prepare a plan that would establish the special school. Board member T. E. Dewey was absent.

One of the three main recommendations in the report would provide alternatives for junior high students not served well by existing programs.

The special, separate school would serve students on long-term suspension, but of compulsory attendance age, who are temporarily barred from all education programs in Lincoln.

Special Programs Proposed

Several junior highs would also be encouraged to set up "school-within-a-school programs" for potential drop-outs and others with adjustment and discipline problems. Peterson, chairman of the panel studying possibilities, also recommended drop-out prevention programs and special advocacy activities to support students when they return to regular junior high classes.

Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction, told the board that 157 junior high students were referred to the student services central office since September, for "serious (and repeated) disciplinary problems."

Despite counseling, 22 students either repeated offenses or refused to cooperate with improvement plans during the first semester, and seven more were suspended since January.

Thus, Brandt said 29 students could have been served directly in the alternative junior high, and a total of 75 to 110 "would have benefited" from short-term programs.

Problems Outside Class

They generally get into trouble, Brandt said, not in class, but away from school, in school hallways and bathrooms. Peterson said they usually aren't limited in academic ability and some are above average, but they defy community authority.

The alternative program would be designed to return those students to regular classes as quickly as possible. Brandt said Peterson recommended an "activity-oriented" school offering much individual help and mixing in basic skills in longer-than-normal hours, by counseling and involving parents.

School officials and police are currently cooperating in sharing records to determine troubled youths' needs.

Brandt said he hasn't yet selected a location for the alternate junior high. No cost has been determined, but Brandt has applied for $90,000 from the Crime Commission to pay a director, auxiliary staff and social worker.

Other Factors Noted

Board member Pearl Goldenstein said any cost would be offset by the ultimate expense to the community for offenders in the criminal justice system and less productive drop-outs.

In accepting the study committee report, the board adopted a statement of junior high goals, which would continue development of basic education, including basic skills, promote growth in problem-solving and thinking abilities, promote personal and social development, and provide for exploration and continuing development of individual talents and interests.

To meet young adolescents needs, junior highs will define expected student performance and plan the curriculum around that. Information systems will be improved to keep track of student studies and skills mastery. Programs will be designated for exploration or mastery.

Define Systems Necessary

And each junior high must have some defined system, such as a teacher-adviser program, to build and maintain relationships between the staff members and students. Staffs will work to ease the transition to senior high.

The junior high math requirement will be two years, with competency testing permitted to waive more math after Grade 8. The one-semester science requirement will be unchanged. Junior high principals may waive or add requirements for individual students when justified, a new feature.

The board deferred action on a proposed change in the policy on curriculum change. Brandt will rewrite the section on board delegation of responsibility for instructional materials and teaching methods. He said he intends to scrap the systematic course review-change plan for one which would develop year-long continuity from kindergarten through 6th grade.

The policy would avoid putting teachers under undue pressure, Brandt said. Elementary school materials which may be considered offensive or sensitive would be reviewed by advisory committees, including parents.

Brandt said that could be extended to review all curriculum materials, but he and Prashch warned that could be unwieldy.

No Guns, Please

Please check all weapons with the secretary — a sign outside the Legislative Judiciary Committee's hearing room read Tuesday.

The sign was a bit of macabre humor resulting from the arrest Monday of an Omaha man for carrying a concealed weapon in a committee meeting Monday. The man was convicted Tuesday of disturbing the peace.

Committee Chairman Roland Luedtke of Lincoln referred to the committee's free-wheeling and sometimes heated, style and joked "How can anyone disturb the peace of the Judiciary Committee?"

Exon Corrections Budget Advances

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee Tuesday approved Gov. J. James Exon's recommended budget for the Department of Correctional Services.

But committee members decided they would also send a letter to the department announcing their intention not to accept any budget deficiency request in the coming fiscal year.

And, they said, they will expect the department to pay its bills on time during fiscal 1976-77.

The department has been caught in a budget deficit position at the Penal Complex, resulting in deferred payment of its obligations.

'Good Use' Expected

"We will expect good managerial use of these (1976-77) dollars," Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln declared.

Mrs. Marsh was the author of a motion to accept the governor's budget plan. It was approved on a 7-1 vote, with Sen. Harold Simpson of Lincoln dissenting.

That action boosted the department's state tax support in the tentative committee budget bill by more than $700,000.

State tax support will jump from the current $10.3 million figure to nearly $12.3 million. Other funds will bring the department's total budget to $15.5 million.

Last month, the department boosted its budget request by $300,000 in view of rising population figures at the Penal Complex.

Over Estimate

Population figures had already exceeded the 1,300 population projection in the department's original budget calculations.

The new budget figures assume that the population at the Penitentiary and the Men's Reformatory will reach 1,300 in fiscal 1976-77.

In other action, the committee declined to fund full development of the proposed Nebraska Employee Information System, during the coming fiscal year as recommended by the governor.

Exon had asked for $764,900 in new funding to add to $180,000 already on hand to complete the system within a year.

Legislature

The committee proposed $300,000 in new funding for development of the payroll and personnel information system for state government.

$454,000 Spent

Some $454,000 has already been spent on the system, with full development costs estimated at $1.4 million.

Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica said such a price tag is "fantastic," and that development of such a system "will not give us that much value."

Mrs. Marsh attempted to gain committee support for full funding, but her motion failed to receive even a second.

Funding to the proposal is contained in the budget of the Department of Administrative Services.

The committee reaffirmed an earlier decision to wipe out performance audit funding in the state auditor's office. Exon had recommended $200,000 for that purpose.

The Legislature is considering a proposal to transfer performance auditing to the Legislative Council as a function of legislative oversight.

Kissinger Warns Of Cuban Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger returned home Tuesday night following a six-nation Latin America tour that concluded with a brief inspection of the earthquake devastation in Guatemala.

At a stop in San Jose, Costa Rica, Kissinger said Cuba's actions in Africa show Latin America could face similar intervention, but the United States will not tolerate it.

The secretary rode through ruins in Guatemala City and its suburbs without getting out of his limousine. Before starting the tour, he said: "I regret the circumstances that brought me to Guatemala." He added: "It is disaster which brings out the human qualities and real fortitude of your people."

stop with a visit to a U.S. Army unit that has been sending food by helicopter to interior villages cut off by the quake.

He met briefly with Guatemalan President Kjell Laugerud before flying back to Washington. Guatemala was the last stop on the secretary's 11-day, six-nation Latin American tour.

In the San Jose speech, Kissinger said in reference to the 14,000 Cuban soldiers reported in Angola. "Recent events have shown that foreign adventurism is not dead. Expeditionary forces may still be sent across the oceans to intervene in, and impose their will on, the domestic affairs of other countries."

Kissinger added, "The United States will not tolerate a challenge to the solemn treaty principle of noninterference in this hemisphere."

With those words, the secretary was invoking the Treaty of Rio de Janeiro, the basic security arrangement for the Western Hemisphere, first concluded in 1947 and updated last year.

Until Tuesday, Kissinger had been saying Cuba behaved reasonably in the region and he limited his criticism to its actions in Angola.

Before he left for Guatemala, Kissinger met separately with the foreign ministers of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras and Nicaragua as well as the chief of Panama's town negotiating a new canal treaty.

A U.S. official who sat in on the meeting between Kissinger and Juan Antonio Tack of Panama said the talks were friendly and serious.

Soviets To Pursue Detente, Foreign 'Liberation' Struggles

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Communist leader Leonid I. Brezhnev promised "redoubled energy" Tuesday in the pursuit of peaceful coexistence with the West but said the Kremlin intends to continue support for "liberation" struggles abroad, such as in Angola.

The 69-year-old Brezhnev made his pledge on the opening day of the 25th Soviet Communist party congress in a speech intended to chart this country's course for the next five years.

Brezhnev forcefully repeated Moscow's intention to continue its aid to the leftist Popular Movement — MPLA — government in Angola as a matter of "revolutionary conscience" and said it would also support other ideological allies involved in struggles.

The general secretary, who turns 70 this year, spoke in a strong voice and with firm gestures for five hours and five minutes, in seeming defiance of rumors in the West about his health. He took two recesses during the speech. Nearly 5,000 delegates and 103 foreign delegations gave him a standing ovation for three minutes, 15 seconds at the conclusion.

Leader Seldom Falters
Brezhnev showed buoyancy in delivering his speech. Spectacles perched on his nose and four state medals gleaming on his jacket, the party leader stood at the podium and read in a voice often punctuated with dramatic tones. He seldom faltered.

The speech broke little new ground, and there was no hint of rapprochement with China, which greeted the congress with a 2,500-word denunciation of Soviet acts.

"The Soviet revisionists' evils and scandals in the past five years are too numerous to be mentioned here," said an article broadcast by Peking's Hsinhua news agency.

Observers here saw the speech as a fortification of both the Brezhnev peace program, which has served for the past four years as the foundation of Soviet foreign policy, and the Communist commitment to continue the ideological struggle against the capitalist world.

"The foreign policy of the Soviet Union has the respect and support of many millions of the masses throughout the world," he said, "and we will continue this policy with redoubled energy to reach a lessening of the forces of war and strengthening of over-all peace and to secure the people's rights of freedom, independence and social progress."

Relations With U.S. Important
In reviewing the progress of detente, Brezhnev lent particular importance to Soviet relations with the United States as

"decisive in reducing the danger of another world war and in consolidating peace."

He said the prospects for improving Soviet-American relations are good, but he noted "serious factors" complicating the friendship.

"Influential circles in the United States that have no stake in either improving relations with the Soviet Union or in international detente as a whole, are trying to impair it (the relationship). They portray the policy of the Soviet Union in a false light and refer to an imaginary 'Soviet menace' in order to promote a new intensification of the arms race in the U.S.A. and in NATO," the Soviet leader said.

Later in his speech, Brezhnev added: "In fact, of course, there is no Soviet threat either in the West or East. It is all a monstrous lie from beginning to end. The Soviet Union has not the slightest intention of attacking anyone. The Soviet Union does not need war. The Soviet Union does not increase its military budget, and, far from reducing, is steadily augmenting allocations for improving the people's well-being."

Western observers contend that although the Soviets have on paper proportionately reduced their defense allocations, they in reality continue to pump more money into the military sector.

Ban on B1, Trident Proposed
Focusing on the strategic arms limitation talks — SALT — Brezhnev said the Soviets proposed that the American side ban its missile-carrying Trident submarines and long-range B1 bombers in exchange for a ban on "similar systems" in this country. "Deplorably, these proposals were not accepted by the U.S. side," he told the congress.

In Washington, State Department officials discounted Brezhnev's remarks. They said the Soviets have privately expressed an interest in halting development of the Trident and B1, but Soviet negotiators have never said which of their own weapons they would be willing to restrict in return.

A top department official told The Associated Press the Soviet negotiators have claimed Russian systems mentioned by the American side were not new or comparable to the Trident and the B1, but were updated versions of older weapons.

Besides, he said, the Trident and the B1 would be limited by terms of the understanding reached by President Ford and Brezhnev at Vladivostok in November 1974 to hold each side to 2,400 strategic delivery vehicles.

Swipe Taken At Deviationists
Brezhnev took a swipe at foreign Communists who deviate from Marxist-Leninist principles. He called such tendencies "opportunism" and declared the duty of Soviet Communists is to defend "proletarian internationalism."

The French Communist party just this month rejected the Communist doctrine of dictatorship of the proletariat. Like the Italian party, the French proposed participation in Western parliamentary government.

French party leader Georges Marchais stayed away from the congress because of these differences and sent a delegation of lesser officials.

For the strengthening of peace, Brezhnev proposed specific "vital tasks" for the Communist party. The key elements were to:

— "Do everything" to conclude a U.S.-Soviet SALT accord on offensive nuclear weapons and work toward a "universal and complete ban on nuclear weapons tests, on banning and destroying chemical weapons, on banning development of new types and systems of mass annihilation and also on banning harm to the natural environment for military or other hostile purposes."

— Make new efforts to push ahead negotiations on reducing the levels of troops and arms in central Europe.

— Promote the "earliest possible convocation" of a world disarmament conference.

— Try to convince peace-loving states to eliminate remaining hotbeds of war.

— Work for a world treaty on the nonuse of force in international relations.

The latter proposal was the only noticeably new element in the Brezhnev peace doctrine, but he did not elaborate on the idea.

Brezhnev talked toughly about China, lumping it with "militarists and enemies of detente in Western countries, racists of South Africa and the Fascist rulers in Chile." He pledged to "continue the struggle against Maoism, a principled and irreconcilable struggle."

However, Brezhnev repeated a frequent public commitment to normalize relations with China "in line with the principles of peaceful coexistence." The Chinese were not invited to the Soviet party congress for the second straight time.

On the Middle East, Brezhnev said the Soviet Union "is prepared to cooperate in all efforts to reach an effective settlement of the conflict. We are prepared to participate in international guarantees of security and inviolability of the frontiers of all Middle East countries either in the U.N. framework or on some other basis."

The Chinese denunciation of Soviet acts, which was monitored in Tokyo, derided Moscow for its economic and agricultural failures.

Soviet Union Trade Deficit Is $4.7 Billion

(e) Washington Star
Washington — The Soviet Union piled up a record foreign trade deficit of $4.7 billion last year, will have another substantial deficit this year, and now may push Western governments for larger subsidized credits, according to a CIA study.

Although import orders are still being placed, Soviet officials apparently are under instructions to trim or postpone foreign purchases whenever possible, the study of Soviet hard-currency trade says. And "some hard decisions" on restricting imports will become necessary if exports cannot be increased substantially.

By picturing Moscow in a weak position of needing credits, the CIA study could revive the issue of whether Western countries should help the Soviet economy and, if so, on what economic and political terms.

Mao Indignant With Rightists

•The New York Times
By FOX BUTTERFIELD

Hong Kong — For the first time since the current series of attacks on rightists in China intensified earlier this month, the official daily, Jenmin Jin Pao, Tuesday quoted Chairman Mao Tse-tung as personally expressing indignation at the rightists.

Also, in what analysts here took as a compromise between party leaders who have been feuding over the proper course of economic development, the paper called on China's peasants not to neglect spring planting. The call and Mao's new quotation were contained in an editorial on spring farming.

The editorial also raised a question whether China's new acting premier, Hua Kuo-feng, might also become a target of the attacks. For it seemed to play down deliberately a major national conference on agriculture last year in which Hua played a key role.

Hua, who was named to his post in a surprise move two weeks ago, had a third round of talks Tuesday with former President Richard M. Nixon.

The new quotation from Mao was obscure and evidently taken from the middle of a rambling conversation. But analysts here believed it was significant because for the first time since the recent controversy suddenly escalated after the death of former Premier Chou En-lai last month, the chairman was publicly identified squarely with the attackers.

The attacks have involved alleged "capitalist roaders within the party" who are charged with overemphasizing a program of stability and economic growth at the expense of Mao's desire for more revolutionary class struggle. Specifically, recent articles in the Chinese press have charged the rightists with fraudulently splicing together three separate directives last year so that a call by Mao for class struggle was distorted and overlooked.

According to an inadequate English translation of Mao's new remark provided by Hsinhua, the Chinese press agency, he said: "What taking the three directives as the key link?"

A better rendering would be, "What do you mean, taking the three directives as the key link?" In Chinese the remark is clearly angry, with the chairman smelling a deception.

Mao then added, in a quote already published on New Year's Day, "Unity and stability do not mean writing off the class struggle. Class struggle is the key link and everything else hinges on it."

The editorial then explained: "This important instruction of Chairman Mao's is a forceful, tit-for-tat criticism of the fallacy 'take the three directives as the key link.'"

Enlarging on the current controversy, the editorial charged that the rightists "make the development of the national economy the key link, as if they and they alone were concerned about developing the national economy. In fact the national economy will go astray if the key link of the class struggle waged by the proletariat against the bourgeoisie is abandoned."

The agriculture conference had called for major investment to mechanize farming and vastly increase agricultural production in China's fifth five-year plan to begin this year.

Got The Munchies? Try A Tasty Termite Tidbit

Boston (UPI) — Locusts, termites and other insects were proposed Tuesday as a high-protein food that man may need to exploit in the future as growing populations compete for conventional foods.

Dr. Dean F. Gamble, deputy director of the National Agriculture Library in Washington, said insects virtually have been ignored as potential foods because of psychological blocks of people investigating diets.

Western culture virtually forbids eating insects though they are a potential source of nutrition of great importance. Gamble said in a paper at the closing day of a week-long meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

As the population explosion continues it may be impossible to continue to ignore these unexploited food resources," Gamble said. "Food is what you find, and man is the most adaptable animal of all in this respect."

Patty Compared To War Survivor

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A defense psychiatrist told jurors Tuesday that Patricia Hearst, fighting for survival in captivity, adopted "alternate personalities," becoming first the revolutionary "Tania" and later a woman named "Pearl."

Dr. L.J. West said that when he first met the newspaper heiress after her arrest last September she was "a person without an identity."

West, director of the UCLA Neuropsychiatric Institute and an expert in the study of prisoner-of-war torture, frequently compared Miss Hearst to the survivor of a war or of a concentration camp.

Even now, he said, she suffers from "survivors' syndrome," fearing she will be killed.

"Patricia Hearst, improved as she is, still trembles at mention of the SLA," said the doctor, who first examined her 10 days after her arrest and again nine days ago. "Her last words to me when I last examined her were: 'My biggest worry right now is staying alive.'"

West's testimony in Miss Hearst's behalf — closely paralleling her own witness stand account of her suffering at the hands of the Symbionese Liberation Army — was opposed by the prosecution and strongly challenged on cross-examination.

Asst. U.S. Atty. David Bancroft showed that West had written a letter of sympathy and encouragement to the Hearst family while the young defendant was still missing.

The doctor said he wrote as "one parent to another." He recalled:

"I think I expressed some sympathy and told them they should not despair of their daughter's condition because if she were ever returned to them alive she might be in a condition to be helped and possibly defended."

West and the judge confirmed that he told the court about his letter before he was appointed to examine Miss Hearst.

Bancroft also elicited the fact that one of Miss Hearst's first psychological tests given in prison was discarded after she was found consulting with one of her lawyers, Albert Johnson, on the answers.

West, who earlier gave a different reason for it being discarded, said, "There was something like that. I had to chase Mr. Johnson out of there."

But in more than two hours of cross-examination, West declared again and again that his first perceptions of Miss Hearst as a "battered" victim of the SLA were correct. West, the only witness called Tuesday, was to be cross-examined further about the heiress defendant Wednesday when the trial resumed.

Hearing Not Necessary For Disability Pay Cuts

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 6 to 2 Tuesday that the Social Security benefits of disabled workers can be cut off without a hearing.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., writing for the majority, said disabled workers are protected by the federal and state review process and can receive retroactive payments if the cutoff was improper.

The appeal involved a suit by George H. Eldridge of Abingdon, Va., whose benefits were terminated despite his claim of disability due to arthritis in his back.

In 1970, the court said an evidentiary hearing is required before federally supported welfare benefits can be terminated.

But Powell said the consequences of ending disability benefits are not as great as in welfare cases, so a pre-termination hearing is not required under the due process clause of the Constitution.

The decision reversed the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which ruled that disability payments are nearly indistinguishable from welfare needs. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare appealed, saying the cost of continuing disputed disability payments would run to $30 million a year.

Powell noted that disability benefits, unlike welfare, are not based on financial needs, only on the presence of a disabling injury.

In addition, Powell said, the issue in disability cases is a "more sharply focused and easily documented decision than the typical determination of welfare entitlement" because a doctor's examination is required.

Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall dissented, with new Justice John Paul Stevens not participating. Brennan said the majority's conclusions were "speculative."

Group Tentatively Rejects Social Security Tax Hike

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee Tuesday tentatively rejected President Ford's proposed increase in Social Security taxes.

The voice-vote decision came during a general committee review of possible fiscal 1977 expenditures, required by the new congressional budget process. Ford's proposal will not be formally considered until later in the year.

Ford proposed that the Social Security tax rate in 1977 be increased from 5.85% to 6.15% on both employer and employee.

The wage base on which Social Security is calculated already is scheduled to rise from $15,300 to $16,500 in 1977. This would mean that the maximum tax in 1977 would be $1,014.75 instead of $965.26 as under present law.

Ford said the $3.5 billion increase was needed to salvage the declining Social Security trust fund. He said the increase would mean less than $1 per week to any taxpayer.

Committee Chairman Russell Long, D-La., said there was no great rush to raise taxes this year. He noted that the fund was not projected to get into trouble before the early 1980s.

The committee also tentatively decided to make up to $600 million in improvements to the Supplemental Security Income program, the new federalized welfare program handled under Social Security.

Handgun Ban Approved 18-14

Washington (UPI) — The House Judiciary Committee Tuesday for the first time approved a ban on the sale, manufacture and importation of cheap, easily concealable handguns such as "Saturday night specials." The committee, working on legislation to tighten up federal gun control laws, voted 18 to 14 in favor of a provision aimed at cutting down on the quantity and availability of small, inexpensive handguns.

Food Stamp Plans Narrowly OK'd

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Agriculture Committee Tuesday narrowly approved a package of food stamp reforms including a ban on aid to families with net incomes above the poverty line. The bill would cut the cost of the $5.6 billion program by an estimated $300 million a year. Liberals claimed it would short-change the needy and conservatives said it would not cut deeply enough into federal costs.

Intelligence Panel Advanced

Washington (UPI) — A Senate committee Tuesday unanimously approved creation of a Senate intelligence panel empowered to review covert operations in advance and publish classified data even over White House objections. By a 12-0 vote, the Government Operations Committee approved the legislation and sent it to the Rules Committee, which will decide when it may come up for floor action.

Strip Mine Bill Tried Again

Washington (UPI) — The House Interior Committee Tuesday approved a strip mine regulation bill similar to two versions President Ford vetoed last year. The committee vote was 20 to 11 on a measure sponsored by Rep. John Melcher, D-Mont., which would impose strict environmental regulations on surface mining and create a fund for restoring land already scarred by such operations. Reclamation funds would be built up from fees on coal produced after Jan. 1, 1977.

Senate Okays Island Pact

Washington — The Senate voted Tuesday to grant commonwealth status to the northern Mariana Islands, paving the way for the first territorial expansion of the United States since 1917, when the Virgin Islands were bought from Denmark. The Senate vote of 67 to 22 followed approval by the House last July of a covenant to establish a political union between the Western Pacific group of 21 islands and the United States, making its 14,500 inhabitants American citizens.

Ford Nixes Testimony

Washington — President Ford has invoked executive privilege to prevent employees of the FBI and NSA from testifying Wednesday before a House subcommittee about the government's interception of the messages carried by telegraph companies.

'Bill Won't Plug Leaks'

Washington — The new secrecy bill offered by President Ford will not materially change the government's power to halt news leaks, according to federal security officials. In interviews, they said the government has been reluctant to use the powers it already has to stop such leaks for fear of making further national security disclosures.

Limit Said Discriminatory

Paris — Marcel Cavaile, French secretary of state for transport, Tuesday assailed as "discriminatory" and "anti-constitutional" a bill passed by the New York State legislature that would bar Concorde flights into J.F.K. airport.

Great Lakes Paper Ends Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — A strike at Great Lakes Paper Co. has ended and mill operations were resumed on Tuesday as company officials consider joining the round of price increases in the newsprint industry.

An industry spokesman in New York said, "A significant number of mills on both sides of the border have raised prices $25 a ton, beginning March 1 in general." He added, "It's not yet half of them, but it's enough to know it's a trend."

Great Lakes Paper settled with its paperworkers on Friday and its electrical workers and engineers on Monday. First-year pay increase is 14%, 10% in the second year and 8% in the third year, increases which have been approved by the Canadian government's Anti-Inflation Board. The company employs 3,000 persons in Thunder Bay, Ontario.

In the last few weeks, Canadian paperworkers have been voting to end strikes of five, six and seven-months duration, at one mill after another. Ontario mills were the last to begin voting settlements.

On Tuesday, Crown Zellerbach Corp. in San Francisco, which markets Crown Zellerbach's Canadian production in the Western United States, raised its newsprint prices $20 a ton, from $285 to $305, effective on or after April 1. Prices in the Western regional market are higher than for the rest of the United States.

Macmillan Bloedel Ltd. in Vancouver said on Tuesday that it won't boost its prices in response to the Crown Zellerbach move. A spokesman for Macmillan said the company is staying with its present price structure because an increase would require approval by the Anti-Inflation Board.

Later in the day, Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. said that its Iroquois Falls, Ontario, newsprint mill is operating as of Tuesday, following acceptance of a new contract by skilled tradesmen at the mill.

This means that production is under way at all Abitibi mills, eight in Ontario and one in Quebec, which were struck over varying periods up to seven months. Last week, Abitibi-Price Sales Corp. in New York, which handles sales from both Abitibi and Price Co. papermills in Canada, announced a $25 a ton price rise, from $260 to $285, effective March 8.

HATS OFF! TO INDEPENDENCE

During our nation's Bicentennial Year, Woodmen Accident and Life is proud to join in our nation's salute to independence. Independence is our business — providing people with financial independence through life and health insurance — and we've been doing it since 1890.

In 1975, our 85th year, the company achieved several important new records. Assets increased more than 9% to $145,589,925; life insurance in force grew to $1,231,274,735, up by 7%; total income for the year exceeded $47.9 million; benefits paid or provided for amounted to $30 million while $3,676,000 was paid in dividends to policyowners. In addition to the Mandatory Security Valuation Reserve of $1,249,917, the policyowner surplus at year-end was $15,364,927. Investment return in 1975 was especially favorable — the net yield on invested assets (after investment expenses but before income taxes) rose to 6.67%. This return compares favorably with the estimated average yield of 6.50% for the life insurance business as a whole. These investment earnings reduce the cost of life insurance to policyowners.

Woodmen Accident and Life is proud of its continuing contribution to the economy of Lincoln and all of the 29 states in which it operates. Its Home Office payroll exceeds $2,632,000 annually. In 1975, it purchased goods and services from Lincoln businesses amounting to more than $980,000. Federal, state and local taxes paid by the Company last year totaled $2,400,881. The Company's assets, while held in trust for policyowners, are soundly and productively invested in a well-diversified portfolio of bonds, stocks, mortgage loans and real estate. These insurance funds have helped hundreds of families to acquire their own homes and have stimulated industrial and commercial growth.

In keeping with America's observance of its Bicentennial Year, the theme of our Company's program in 1976 is "Hats Off to Independence" through new dimensions in life and health insurance. We look forward to 1976 as a year when the Company will supply an even larger family of policyowners with the financial security, independence, and peace of mind that private life and health insurance provides.

E. J. Faulkner, President

In Defense Of Schorr

NEW YORK — In suspending Daniel Schorr from his reporting duties, CBS News has succumbed to a campaign launched within the Ford administration to picture the Central Intelligence Agency as an erring but basically worthy victim of those who leak its vital secrets and reporters who print them.

Schorr has conceded that he made a copy of the House Intelligence Committee's report available for publication in the Village Voice, a New York weekly. The charge against him is that he "sold" a document that not only disclosed national security information but which the House of Representatives had voted not to publish. The "selling" charge arises from Schorr's suggestion that the Voice make a contribution to the Reporters' Committee for Freedom, an organization devoted to defending First Amendment rights.

It is unfortunately irrelevant that anyone who knows Daniel Schorr knows also that it is absurd to suggest that he sought to profit materially from publication of the House committee report. But those of us who insist, in the cases of presidents and other officials, on a society ruled by laws rather than by men can hardly resort to character references alone in defending even an honored colleague.

But the facts are that Schorr did not suggest payment for himself, but to a cause he considered worthy. He first determined, as a CBS reporter, that the broadcast possibilities of the report had been exhausted. When the possibility of book publication fell through, Clay Felker, publisher of the Voice, offered to print the report.

"I had then to consider," Schorr wrote the editors of The New York Times, "since taking money was unthinkable to me, whether Felker should be the sole beneficiary. If our system inevitably creates profits, should Felker enjoy them exclusively?"

So, I suggested it would be appropriate for him to make some gesture to the free press idea which had animated me by a 'voluntary' contribution to the Reporters' Committee. . . . In fact, the arrangement was so 'voluntary' that the contribution has not been made.

This arrangement may well have been an error of judgment. But Schorr deserves to have it acknowledged that there was no "sale" of the committee report nor any arrangement designed for his personal enrichment, or that of anyone, including members of the non-profit Reporters' Committee; and that he at least thought he was precluding a "profit" even for the Village Voice.

The other major question concerning publication of the committee report is whether Schorr should have turned it over to the Voice in any circumstances. Did not the House vote to keep it secret? Has not George Bush, the new CIA director, said that publication damaged national security?

In fact, Bush was most unspecific about what damage had been done and took refuge in the ancient governmental dodge of saying, in effect, "If you only knew what I knew . . . but of course I can't tell you what I know." When the government made precisely this charge about publication of the Pentagon Papers in 1971 — that the national security had been damaged in ways it could not publicly discuss — Federal Judge Murray Gurfein, in the secrecy of his chambers, was unable in an IN CAMERA session to elicit from government witnesses a single specific instance of actual damage to the national security.

This history, of course, proves nothing about the committee report except that statements like Bush's should be regarded with much skepticism — particularly since (a) most of the report's major points had previously been published, so that at worse any security damage already had been done; (b) other reasonably knowledgeable persons, including the House committee and its staff, believed that, as Schorr said, it contained "nothing more of national security significance, certainly nothing that would endanger any Besides, Bush himself, appearing on "Meet The Press," conceded that "the fundamental question is that Congress voted by almost two-to-one that the report not be made public, and it was made public . . . That's just plain wrong." This is the basic charge against Schorr, but it is George Bush who is just plain wrong.

How is it different for the House to vote to suppress a public document than for a president to suppress it? If President Ford, for example, had decided not to make public the report of the Rockefeller Commission he appointed to study CIA abuses, would that have made it "just plain wrong" for a good reporter like Dan Schorr to get hold of it and put it on the public record?

Of course not; for to say so would be to say that either a president alone or the House by majority vote can decide what a free press may or may not publish. In the Pentagon Papers case, the Supreme Court specifically ruled against any such doctrine — contravening, as it would, the First Amendment — although it left open the possibility that some narrowly specified matters might be of such immense and immediate security importance as to warrant "prior restraint."

No one has suggested that the House committee report is even remotely such a matter, and after a year-long investigation conducted at public expense, it was in fact a document that belonged where Dan Schorr put it — on the public record.

First The Teamsters, Now Mao

Just a private citizen visiting old chums abroad.

There was a fairly strong argument in favor of that view of Richard Nixon's return to China on the fourth anniversary of his historic first visit, but the argument has dissolved in a flood of mao tai toasts, high level talks and state banquets which are not afforded your average western tourist.

This private trip has become a public affair with the cooperation of the Chinese, the Nixons and the media.

The disgraced former president has been accorded all the honors normally reserved for a visiting chief of state. And it isn't sufficient to explain the Chinese hospitality as merely a reflection of the hosts' esteem for Nixon and in remembrance of his treatment of them while he was in office.

The Nixon trip has become a full-blown diplomatic incident and intended personal triumph for the former president, who is seeking political rehabilitation and will take whatever he can get from any source. This is a major milestone on the comeback trail, which started with the Teamsters golf tournament last year.

Average private citizens are not met at the airport by 350 officials hosts and the acting head of government. Casual tourists do not meet with Chairman Mao for an hour and a half. Your next door neighbor does not make public, intended-for-world-consumption, toasts with thinly-veiled foreign policy implications in the Great Hall of the People. Who is the last person you know who got picked up by a Chinese jet and whose trip was followed and reported on in detail by the world press?

The Chinese are using Nixon to attack U.S. foreign policy, President Ford, the Soviet Union and probably everybody else and everything else they are mad at. And Nixon is using China as part of his grand strategy for vindication or absolution. Just apologizing to the American people for all the lies would have been so much easier.

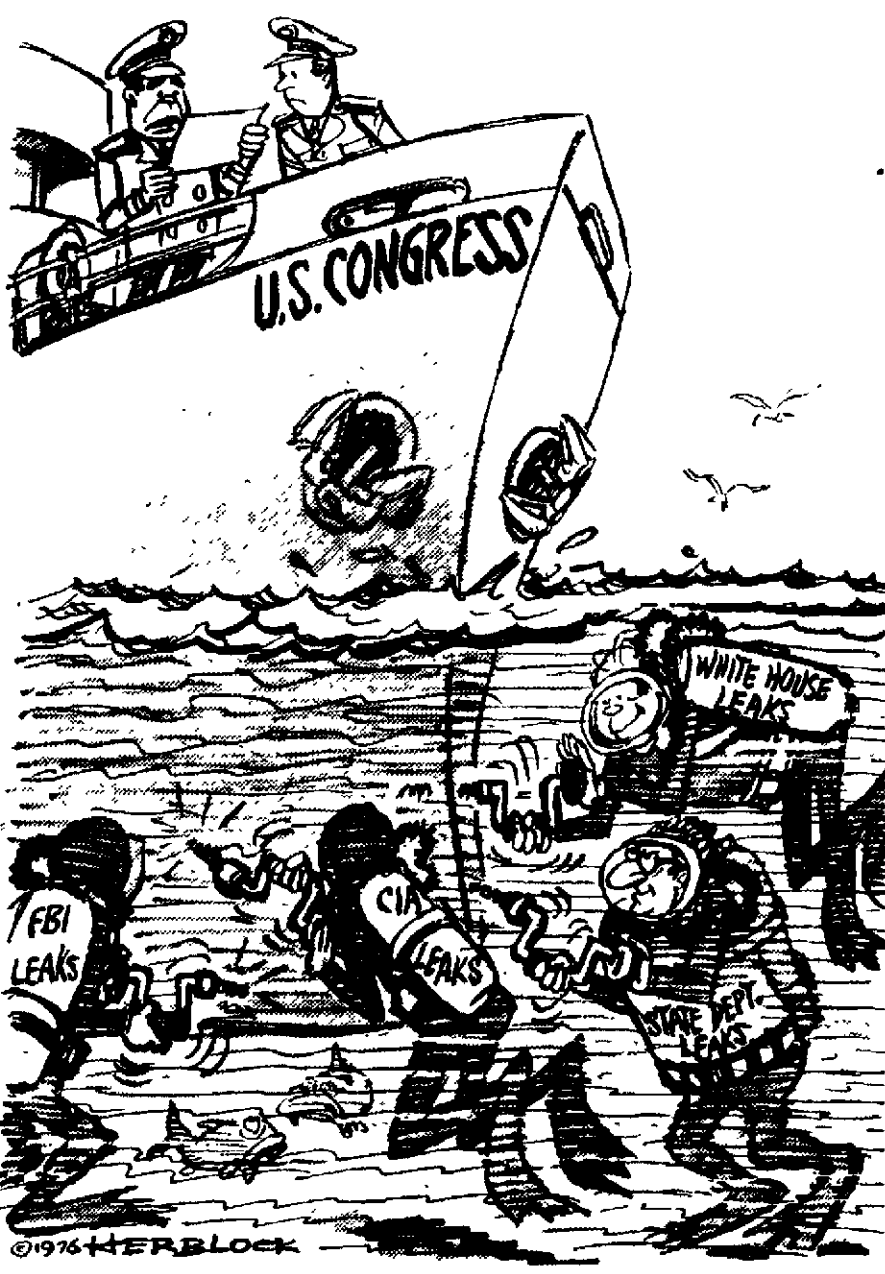

The Ford administration has been pretty low-key about the Nixon trip. The President says the trip is not meant to embarrass him; that Nixon's return to China is an understandable event about which people should not be overly concerned. Although some State Department officials are yelping about Nixon's public statements from Peking, Secretary of State Kissinger says he doesn't think the former president is attacking him or U.S. foreign policy. But we'll bet our last dollar that both would secretly like to strangle Nixon for trying to rehabilitate himself at no small expense to them and the U.S. taxpayer.

If the Nixon trip is truly supposed to be a non-event, as many people, including the administration, seem to claim, then no matter the media exposure, it should be officially ignored in Washington.

There should be no need for a briefing by Nixon when he returns from China, with all the publicity and aura of expert elder world statesman that kind of attention would naturally give him.

The less said about this spectacle, the better.

'E' Team Asks Help

Lincoln, Neb.

The Nebraska Communications Emergency Team is endeavoring to assist the people of Lincoln by relaying messages of accidents, traffic tie-ups, etc. to the L. P. D., word of fires to the L.F.D. and messages to local ambulance firms.

Even though Channel 9 is the allotted national emergency channel, we are not allowed to use this channel. The "E" Team must operate on another channel. We chose Channel 8 and try to monitor this channel on a 24-hour basis, but since it is a voluntary organization it is hard to guarantee coverage around the clock.

We assist with Honey Sunday, the Muscular Dystrophy Drive, midget football candy sales, etc. with radio communications. All members must equip their autos with radio, first-aid kits, fire extinguishers, tow chains, jumper cables, etc. to help our fellow man without charge.

What, you say, do we get out of this? The warm feeling of helping Lincoln grow and prosper into a safe place to rear our children.

Lately we have been unable to use Channel 8 due to a few CB'ers trying to block these types of transmissions, for want of something better to do. I plead with those few to help us again to be of service to our community. It will really make them feel better, believe me. Our thanks.

Three Points Well Taken

Lincoln, Neb.

As the mother of five children in the Lincoln Public Schools and an active sympathizer with that much-maligned group against personal-social development in the public schools, I must make several points.

(1) We are neither ostriches, political radicals, or far-out religious zealots. We can be distinguished from the general population only by the telephone receivers which appear to have grown from our ears as a result of answering calls agreeing with our stand.

(2) Contrary to being an attack on the teachers, our position is supportive of them. Right now they are expected to do the job for which they are educated, and the job of the parents, too, i.e. teaching morals, values, etc. They should not have to do my job, and I don't want them to. It is as simple as that.

(3) We are not attempting to dictate how others should raise their children. We are merely asking for the freedom to instill in our own children our own moral, political and social attitudes, free from interference and undermining. We do not care if the schools teach Buddhism if there is an alternative for those who dissent. We resent the fact that this "unteaching" is an every arm of the curriculum, making it impossible to have a choice. The only way out is private schools, unless the school board decides to consider the possibility that we may have a valid point.

MRS. RON KELMAN

RICHARD L. WORSNOP Leaky Capital

WASHINGTON — Too many leaks can cause a flood, and that is what is happening now in Washington. The publication by The Village Voice of excerpts from the House Select Intelligence Committee's report on the CIA produced the expected cries of outrage from the White House. But while much of the material had previously been leaked to and published by other papers, the Voice's handling of it served to crystallize the growing skepticism among newsmen about the ethics of leaking.

"... (S)omething does appear to have gone out of control," Newsweek observed. "Some reporters of late seem ready to seize anything that smacks of revelation — regardless of its potential for mischief. It has become a possibly dangerous game of flippers-keepers, in which no one is quite sure what may ultimately be won or lost, and neither the national nor the public interest is a paramount factor."

Esquire magazine columnist Timothy Crouse offered this explanation of why leaks are so prevalent in the nation's capital: "In a town where people believe hardly anything that anyone says, there is only one test for truth which is widely accepted as foolproof: whatever is secret must be true."

Although leaking of supposedly secret information is a common practice, the mechanics of it are not widely understood outside of the news business. It might be supposed that the leaking of large documents such as the Pentagon Papers or the intelligence committee report are representative examples of how the game is played. But that is not the case.

According to Max Frankel of The New York Times, "The great majority of deliberate leaks are not secret documents and papers, but guarded suggestions that a reporter look into a matter that he might otherwise neglect. More often than not, he is not even told what he will find." Hundreds of leaks of this nature enabled investigative reporters to unravel the Watergate scandal.

Experienced reporters assume that self-serving motives govern leaks of classified material, and that the leaked information tells only part of the story which the government official wants known. Accordingly, the reporter usually tries to dig for as much of the remainder of the story as he can find.

The question of whether Congress or the executive branch is more prone to leak information to the news media has provoked endless debate. After a leak-based story on the House Intelligence Committee report appeared in The New York Times Jan. 26, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the "unauthorized release raises serious questions about how classified material can be handled by Congress when national security is at stake."

There would appear to be only one sure-fire way of abolishing leaks, and that is to do away with government secrecy.

Mr. Nixon — Villain Or Victim?

Lincoln, Neb.

The Star's editorial, "A Strange Set of Values" (Feb. 21) is an interesting collection of (possibly unwarranted) assumptions. Why does The Star so readily assume that Richard Nixon retains the regard of "relatively few diehards"? Who knows how many Americans feel he was as much victim as villain, and victim of an outrageously one-sided political morality, at that? Perhaps a significant number of thoughtful and compassionate Americans do not dismiss him as a non-person, a fate he might have suffered in a less democratic country. Writers now say any cruel or irresponsible thing they wish to say about him, since they know his "defenders" have been stifled. His name is widely supposed to evoke a curl of the lip and visions of unprecedented political evil.

Why does The Star assume that its narrow view of Nixon is "likely" to prevail for centuries? However unforgiving, history may still perceive him as a genuinely tragic figure. It may see him as a "superior statesman," the only one of his generation (name one other, besides his protégé, Henry K.) in spite of The Star's cynical assumption that only astigmatic China sees him that way now. If the current politicians shared his world view, his sense of the subtle shifts and stresses of power, his guile, we might not be hearing about a "renewal of the Cold War." Certainly no one now commands the world stage as he did.

I write this because I resent the assumption that all but a "few diehards" agree with all the worst The Star can say about Richard Nixon. This assumption, general in the press, intimidates even those who have enough mind and heart to question the underlying assumptions in what they read.

The Real Reason

Elmwood, Neb.

There has been a lot of talk about planting more trees and cover for pheasants and quail to hatch their young. That isn't the reason for our pheasant and quail population getting less every year.

I work in Lincoln and come home every morning between 7:30 and 8:00, but in the last four years I haven't seen over a dozen pheasants. The reason our supply of pheasants and quail is getting short is the weed killer and fertilizer for corn and alfalfa. There has been a TV special showing areas where these kill robins and other birds.

Stirring Things Up

The Legislature's Revenue Committee Monday took aim at a struggling effort to freeze at the current level property tax exemptions for certain farm and business equipment and inventories. Sen. Frank Lewis had introduced three bills to limit the exemptions which have been sliding upwards on a scale authorized by the Legislature over gubernatorial veto some sessions ago. The revenue panel killed the Lewis trio of bills on a 5-1 vote with two abstentions.

Lewis said he would offer amendments to legislation already on the floor of the Unicameral to accomplish his purpose. That effort ended in failure Tuesday.

"It's unfortunate that Sen. Lewis has stirred this thing up again," said Sen. James Dickinson, a leader in opposition to the bills, who said he has heard no groundswell of support for limiting the exemption program.

If there has been no such groundswell, it is because the people who are paying for the property tax relief don't realize how much they are paying.

State sales and income tax revenue totaling $40 million is used to reimburse counties for the lost revenue and that total is scheduled to climb, of course. City dwellers are getting hit the hardest in paying for the exemption program.

It is not "unfortunate," that Lewis "stirred this thing up again," it was commendable on his part.

He did not meet with any more success on the floor than he did in committee. Nevertheless, it is time that the property tax exemption program is reviewed.

SE Asia Treaty Signed

The New York Times

Bangkok, Thailand — The leaders of the five Southeast Asian nations wound up their two-day summit meeting on the island of Bali Tuesday, signing the first treaty binding their countries together and a declaration looking toward further cooperation in a broad variety of spheres.

In the documents, made available in the five capitals as the leaders were signing them on Bali, there were, however, none of the specific goals, particularly in the economic fields, that some of the countries had hoped would move the Association of Southeast Asian Nations further along the road to a true economic or political community than has been the case in its first eight years of existence.

The treaty of amity and cooperation as well as the accompanying declaration of Concord, did for the first time establish a fulltime ASEAN secretariat as well as "high council" on the ministerial level that would resolve political disputes among the signatory nations — Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines.

The teeth of the key political provision on arbitration of disputes was, however, removed by an insistence by Malaysia that the agreement of all parties to such a dispute be obtained before any arbitration might take place. Malaysia is particularly concerned that the Philippines could use such a mechanism to revive its claims to the state of Sabah, a part of East Malaysia.

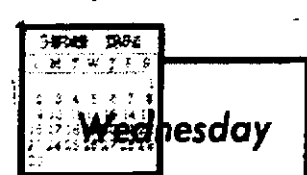

While the economic portions of the documents were also somewhat diluted by fears of Indonesia that a free trade area or customs union being pressed by Singapore could destroy her economy, there were several concrete steps taken at the summit that were encouraging to supporters of a Southeast Asian common market concept.

Specifically, the declaration of concord pledged cooperation in sharing of basic, scarce commodities, particularly in food and energy, and the development of joint commodity and tariff negotiating positions in dealing with outside countries or outside groups such as the European Economic Community.

A third document released Tuesday night, a communique that does not have the force of either the declaration or the treaty, said the specific instruments to be used to encourage inter-ASEAN trade, would include long-term quantity contracts in a variety of goods and commodities, financial support of purchases and preferential interest rates, and extension of tariff preference.

The ASEAN economics ministers will meet in Kuala Lumpur March 8-9 to begin implementing these ideas.

The declaration also mentioned a concept that has been the subject of considerable discussion in recent months — recognition of Southeast Asia as a "zone of peace, freedom and neutrality."

Mrs. Exon Raises Own Worms

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Every First Family has its secrets. Somehow they always manage to get out.

Take Gov. Jim Exon, for instance. You've seen him on the cover of the state highway maps, a grinning angler proudly displaying a plump trout.

Well, the grin probably belies the fact he's trying to keep from splitting a gut because he's putting us all on.

Nebraska's First Lady Mrs. Pat Exon reports that she caught the trout her husband is pictured with.

The truth is that Mrs. Exon is perhaps the foremost fisherwoman (maybe even fishperson?) in the realm.

Most women receive flowers or a night on the town for their birthday or anniversary. Pat Exon gets fishing flies, an aluminum boat or an outboard motor on such occasions.

And that brings us to the second revelation about heretofore First Family secrets.

A nuclear war apparently not imminent, the bombshelter beneath the Governor's Mansion is doubling as a nursery for Pat Exon's earthworms, or in fishing parlance, nightcrawlers.

A screened wooden box in the bombshelter serves as home for the wiggly creatures Mrs. Exon uses to entice fish.

Not Enough Free Time

However, the press of being First Lady cuts down on the time Mrs. Exon has to pursue her fishing avocation.

So when she does find time to sneak away to one of the Salt Valley impoundments every minute counts.

"I found that by the time I finally found a place selling worms there wasn't much time left for fishing," she said.

What was needed, she decided, was a ready supply of worms for whenever the fishing bug bit.

She and her daughter caught the nightcrawlers on the mansion grounds after rains.

Her Worms Are Healthier

With a sense of pride, she declares that her nightcrawlers are "healthier" than those you buy.

"The ones you buy are usually gotten to the surface with an electrical shock," she said.

The mansion nightcrawlers' staples consist of powdered milk and corn meal.

Their diet, temperature and moisture are all critical to successful angling because Mrs. Exon says, "My theory is the bigger the worm, the bigger the fish."

To further the cause of worms, she's also waged an unsuccessful campaign to cut down the use of fertilizer on the lawn of the Governor's Mansion.

"The fertilizer burns the worms," she explained.

Does she cringe at the thought of hooking worms?

"If you can't hook a worm, you can't fish," she said.

As you might suspect, there is a healthy discussion about who is the better angler in the family. In the mansion library, there's a large stuffed fish caught in Canada which attests to her husband's prowess.

"I like to brag about myself," Mrs. Exon said. "He gets the biggest, but the only reasons he does is because he goes where the biggest ones are."

She Couldn't Go

She said Jim refused to take her on his Canadian fishing trip. "He said it would be 'too rugged' for me, but I've put up with Minnesota mosquitoes," she remarked.

Consequently, most of Pat's fishing is confined to the Lincoln area and an annual trip to Fort Robinson for trout.

The Salt Valley lakes are a Godsend for her. "I can remember when there wasn't a decent place to fish in Lincoln," she said.

When asked about her best catches, she referred to the map cover of Jim holding the trout.

"A friend said Jim and that fish are two of the best catches I've ever made. I agree."

FIRST LADY HOLDS WORM BRIEFLY . . . even a fisherwoman doesn't like them.

FOOD . . . mostly corn meal and powdered milk.

STATE MAP . . . but who caught fish?

Opening lead - six of clubs.

Let's say you're in three notrump and West leads a club. East playing the queen. It is often right to duck when you hold the A-K — in order to interfere with enemy communications — but the question is whether or not it is right in this case (without seeing the East-West cards).

Note that if you duck you go down one. East plays another club and you wind up losing three clubs and two aces. But if you win the first club you make the contract against any method of defense.

It is easy to prove that taking East's queen is the right play. You start by assuming that West, who presumably led his fourth best club, did not lead a club from the J-10-9-8-7-6-5-x, because with that holding he would have led the jack, not the six.

It is also safe to assume that East has specifically the doubleton Q-10 or Q-9 of clubs — because if he has Q-10-2 or Q-9-2 you are certain to make the contract whether you take the queen or duck. The only tricks you'd lose would be two clubs and two aces.

After winning the opening lead, you force out the ace of diamonds. If East has the ace and returns the nine (or ten) of clubs, you duck and thus assure the contract.

If West has the ace of diamonds (the actual case), you are equally certain of the outcome. You duck the club return — whether he plays the jack or the deuce — and in that way discombobulate the defense.

There is a proper time to refuse a trick and a proper time to win a trick, but when you do one or the other is largely a matter of exercising good judgment.

Lincoln lumberman Reon Pauley rebuilt the Pike in 1936. It was a 100x104-foot structure which cost between $50,000 and $60,000 to build, Pauley said at the time of the fire. Estimated building cost for a luke structure had risen to $200,000 by 1961, he added.

Only One Still Open

That move was made necessary because "You can't get them (the name bands) on Saturdays," Copple said.

Crowd Came To See

Those comments came at a time of transition for the existing, and still jumping, ballroom, Pla-Mor at 6600 West O, on the eastern edge of Emerald

Rock music of the late '60s had played a role in the Pla-Mor story, and the building was the scene of some big-name attractions for the rock set.

Problems with building safety finally closed the doors of the Pla-Mor until bandsman Gene Benes and his wife Jo Ann bought it in the fall of 1972. Six months and some $75,000 later, the new Pla-Mor was opened to big name bands, and crowds, again.

What Not To Do

Benes, in his nationwide travels as the leader of the Bobby Layne Orchestra and in playing backup to Myron Floren (of Lawrence Welk fame), gained a knowledge of many of the rights and wrongs in ballroom management. It was this knowledge that he brought to the new venture.

Basing a lot of their faith on nostalgia, ballroom owners in the area have found the expected resurgence as young and old alike are listening to the big bands and finding a new thrill in ballroom dancing.

For them, the music is just beginning to live. The day the music died may never have to come again.

ANNE MARIE . . . newspaper refused advertisements.

Entertainer Sues Newspaper

Oklahoma City (UPI) — Entertainer Anne Marie — 67-25-36 — says she is a victim of discrimination because she has so much of a good thing.

Busty women, she argues, are used to advertise all kinds of merchandise, and she wants to know why one of the bustiest of all cannot advertise her act in a newspaper?

"I think it discriminates against me as an entertainer," she complained.

So the 21-year-old singer, dancer and comedian has filed a lawsuit seeking $50,000 damages and an order requiring the Daily Oklahoman and Oklahoma City Times to accept her ads.

She held a news conference to assure her act is clean.

"I never go nude — not 100% topless," she said. "Anyone can take their clothes off. I try to show my talent and costume. If I am sexy and lewd, then my mother must be sexy and lewd, and I love her."

She insists her endowment is entirely natural, inherited from her mother and unaided by silicone or surgery. By the time she entered junior high school in Chicago, says Anne Marie, she was "pushing 40" and at 14 measured 42-22-36.

"I was popular," she said, "but for other reasons. I was president of the chess club."

A reporter asked her to spell it.

"C-h-e-s-s," she replied, adding she also was student council president, valedictorian, homecoming queen, varsity queen and prom queen.

The young entertainer says she works so hard she loses seven pounds a night.

She reveals a generous portion of her upper body "so people will know I'm real." That established, she says she will wear more clothing and hopes to become a screen star in the fashion of the late Jayne Mansfield. So far she has appeared in the X-rated film "Super Vixens."

An Oklahoma Publishing Co. memo given Anne Marie's manager said it is not the firm's intent to harm the amusement industry but "advertisements that include copy and illustrations which are vulgar, indecent, suggestive, or generally offensive to good taste, will not be accepted for publication by these newspapers."

Teacher Submits Inspirational Piece

Today's "Write On" contributor, Marlys W. Hughes, is an English teacher at Lincoln Northeast High School.

The minister, in a sanctimonious tone, was saying, "Let us bow our hearts and heads for the morning prayer."

In the hush which always spreads over a congregation at this point, a giggled 4-year-old sitting on my right snuggled closer to his mother and in a whisper meant only for his mother, but loud enough for many to hear, said, "I sorry, Mommy."

I had not been watching the child, so I didn't know what might have prompted the mother's disapproving glance or word. But the child, anxious for forgiveness, anxious for a forgiving glance, pat or gesture, and above all anxious for reassurance of his mother's love, was, in his childish way, repenting for the deed. He was most certainly asking parental forgiveness, and in the three words there carried the promise of "I not do it again."

"I sorry, Mommy" — childish simplicity, childish earnestness, childish sincerity — yet had he not struck the keynote of Christian prayer life?

I found my mind wandering far from the pastor's prayer, the

write on

prayer for "This vast nation of ours," "the leaders of this great country," "the underprivileged of the world." Again and again I tried to bring my mind back to those in our hospitals, those who were at this moment in beds of pain, but I was not following, indeed, I was not even hearing the masterful petitions offered by the pastor that morning.

I found myself thinking in stead of the week that had passed — of the kind things I just didn't have time to do. I remembered the little mother down the street who so needed an afternoon out but I had been too busy to offer to watch her Chuckie. I remembered the elderly lady next door who hadn't even been in the new grocery store which had opened some weeks before because it was just too far for her to walk, yet my car had sat in the drive while I idly coffeed with a friend. I recalled the little chap in my Sunday School class who had asked "Why don't you stop and see my mommy, she's lonesome." And I really had intended to call on her and invite her to church.

I was jolted back into reality when I heard the minister say, "All these things we would ask in the name of our most gracious Father Amen."

I had not heard his prayer. I had not followed his petitions or his blessings. But in the momentary hush before the choral amen, before the activity of worship resumed, I had time for one brief word with my God. And with all the simplicity, the earnestness, and the sincerity of my little friend and with all his confidence of being forgiven and returned to parental love, I murmured, "I sorry, God."

Virgin's Confession Scares Boyfriend Off

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive, natural blonde who was raised by strict parents. I love the Lord and have been saved. I've dated quite a lot, but I never let a man get too close to me because I wanted to keep my virginity for my husband.

Five months ago, I met a 29-year-old man to whom I was attracted like I couldn't believe was possible. One thing led to another, and I finally told him that I was a virgin.

He said that I was "one in a million," which I took as a compliment, but he never called me after that. Thinking maybe he was sick, I called him. He sounded rather cool and distant, and said he had been busy with his work and would call me soon.

Well, it's been a month, and he hasn't called. I really care for him, Abby, and I'm afraid my virginity has scared him off. Perhaps he thinks I'm abnormal to be a virgin at 27. Now, instead of being proud of myself, I feel like an overlooked wallflower.

I'm considering going to a gynecologist and asking him to surgically deflower me. Do you think he would do it?

CAROLINA VIRGIN
DEAR VIRGIN: Probably, but since a virgin is someone who has never experienced sexual relations, it wouldn't alter your status as a virgin.

The advice from here is to stay as you are and be proud of it. And if you "scared him off" for that reason, you haven't lost much.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding what to say when confronted with a baby or a picture of one who is obviously very homely, yet whose parents clearly expects a compliment:

A doctor friend once told me that when he delivers a homely or — might as well say it — very ugly baby, and the parent(s) look at him expectantly for some kind of word of praise, he simply grins broadly and says, "Now, there's a REAL boy (or girl)!"

Obviously, it's not a crocodile or platypus, so the doctor hasn't been dishonest and the parents are satisfied.

TOM IN OKLAHOMA CITY

DEAR TOM: Beautiful. But occasionally the doctor is mistaken.

DEAR ABBY: Every time I say, "I love you" to my girlfriend, she says, "Thank you." She never tells me that she loves ME, and that is what I want to hear.

Any suggestions?
ME IN BURLINGTON

Johnny Johnsen Services Set Thursday In Lincoln

Services for Johnny Johnsen, owner of one of the nation's largest college textbook buying and selling companies, will be 11 a.m. Thursday at Westminster Presbyterian Church. The 64-year-old businessman died Monday.

Johnsen started buying and selling college textbooks in Lincoln in 1937.

He was the former owner and president of the Nebraska Book Co., which operated the Nebraska Book Store, Campus Book Store and Plainsman Book Store in Lincoln.

The company and five other corporations — University Book Store in Des Moines; Bargain Book Store in Denver; College Book Co. of Los Angeles; and Johnsen Industries, Inc., and the Campus Book Store, Inc., both of Lincoln — were sold to Lincoln Industries, Inc., in 1973.

Johnsen retained the Iowa Book and Supply Co. of Iowa City. College Enterprises of

Johnny Johnsen

Arizona and New Mexico, and the Washington Book Store and the Uni-way Building Co., both in Seattle.

The Cordova native attended the University of Nebraska. He began his career as a buyer for College Book Store in Columbus, Ohio.

Johnsen later acquired Long's

Book Store in Lincoln, which was renamed the Nebraska Book Store.

Johnsen was chosen a Nebraska Builder in 1973, the highest nonacademic honor bestowed by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

He was honored for business competence, the high esteem in which he was held by his colleagues, his efforts to preserve the nation's cultural heritage in the printed word and his support of the university.

He donated a copy of "The Works of Geoffrey Chaucer", which was published in 1542, to the University of Nebraska in 1971. The volume was the one millionth book acquired by the university libraries.

He was a member and elder of Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Johnsen also was a director on the board of Lincoln Mutual Life Insurance Co. and a vice president of Norden Club.

He was a member of the University Club, Hillcrest Country Club, Lincoln Gun Club and World Senior Golf Association. He was a life member of the American Rifle Association.

Survivors include his wife, Esther; daughters, Sidney Ann of Lincoln and Mrs. Henry (Kathleen) Cannon of Scottsboro, Ala.; brothers, Richard of Bismarck, N.D., and Burdette of Lincoln; sisters, Mrs. Folmer (Reola) Lerager of Wichita, Kan.; Mrs. Norman (Emma) Johnsen of Kirkland, Wash.; Mrs. Richard (Eldene) Moore of San Rafael, Calif.; Mrs. William (Delores) Swoboda of Torrance, Calif.; and a grandson.

Hall County Man Killed By Cut Tree

Grand Island (UPI) — A rural Hall County man died Monday night at a Grand Island hospital from injuries suffered earlier in the day during a tree clearing operation.

The state patrol said Steve Harders, 22, was looking at one tree while another fell on him.

The incident occurred while Harders and others were clearing trees on a neighbor's farm about four miles north of Cairo.

Roxanne Gast Pleads Innocent To Extortion

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Roxanne L. Gast, 19, Council Bluffs, pleaded innocent Tuesday to a charge of attempted extortion in connection with the disappearance of 5-year-old Oliver Mark Bernhardt.

Miss Gast appeared in Council Bluffs Magistrate Court and was released on $2,000 bond.

She was arrested last Thursday after investigation of a letter received by the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Bernhardt of Council Bluffs. The letter demanded $2,000, but authorities said they are convinced Miss Gast had no knowledge of the boy's whereabouts.

The youngster has been missing since Feb. 12.

Judge OKs ABP Lawyer Fees Of $669,000

Omaha (AP) — Federal Bankruptcy Judge David Crawford Tuesday entered an order approving $654,000 in attorneys fees and about $15,000 in expenses for an Omaha law firm which represented American Beef Packers, Inc., in its Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing.

The firm of Fitzgerald,

Brown, Leahy, Strom, Schorr and Barmettler had originally asked for $711,000 plus expenses, but pared that figure by $50,000 after negotiations with ABP officials.

After the figure was reduced to $654,000, ABP withdrew its objection to the Fitzgerald-Brown claim.

Even though the figure was reduced, Lyle Strom, who represented the firm during a hearing on the claim, said he and his associates still felt the $711,000 was justified. He said more than 10,000 hours were spent in the ABP bankruptcy and in defending the firm and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Beefland International, Inc., of Council Bluffs, Iowa, against federal mail and wire fraud charges.

Earlier, Robert Guinan of Omaha and Steve Carter of Sioux City, Iowa, who represented the court-appointed creditors committee in the limited bankruptcy, filed a claim for $725,000.

State Supreme Court To Hear Tax Funds For Promotion Case

By United Press International
The Nebraska Supreme Court will hear arguments March 4 on the constitutionality of a 50-year-old law allowing counties and cities to give chambers of commerce money for such things as industrial development.

Chase contends the law violates a constitutional prohibition against public aid to private individuals and also amounts to an illegal delegation of authority over taxpayer money to a non-governmental body.

"To allow this sort of legislation to stand would open the gates of eligibility for any private group to expend private funds," Chase's attorneys said in written briefs filed with the high court.
Particularly in the area of industrial development where land purchases may be involved, the attorneys said there is a public policy and interest question in that the law allows corporations to "speculate with public funds at a time when cities and counties are hard pressed fiscally to meet the basic needs of their citizens."

Rep. John Y. McCollister

Tax Credit For Housing Aged Urged

WASHINGTON (AP)—Nebraska Rep. John Y. McCollister of Omaha is sponsoring legislation to counter what he terms the "two destructive trends in American society — the destruction of the family and the isolation of the older people from society."

The Omaha Republican said his bill would provide a $250 annual tax credit for taxpayers housing a parent or relative 61 years of age or older.
"We need to develop alternatives to institutionalizing the elderly," McCollister said.
McCollister said one reason for the increased isolation of the elderly has been the destruction of the family unit.
"Years ago, it was commonplace to have younger family members take older parents into their homes," McCollister said. "Many still do. But with so many public benefits available to help pay the costs of institutionalizing a retired parent, all incentive to maintain this family responsibility has been swept away."

Group Will Offer Replacement Judge Nominations

By The Associated Press
Lawyers for a judicial nominating commission are being elected to submit names to Gov. J. James Exon so that a replacement may be named for former Hall County Court Judge Edward Dixon.

four persons who aren't attorneys. All have a vote on the commission, except the chairman, who will be a justice of the State Supreme Court.
Dixon resigned this month effective April 15. He reportedly moved to Colorado to accept a post with a Denver law firm. In December, Dixon became involved in a controversy when he attempted to cite a Grand Island auto dealer and a newspaper publisher for contempt of court.
The case against the auto dealer was dropped, but Dixon continued to press the matter against Ralph Clark, general manager of the Grand Island Independent, until the District Court told Dixon to drop it.

The incident followed publication of a series of national award-winning advertisements for the auto dealer in the Grand Island Independent. Dixon felt the ads were contemptuous of the court.
Dunleavy said a timetable hasn't been established, but he expects to have nominees for the post chosen before April 15

Two or more persons are nominated for the judgeship and Exon then appoints one of them

Murder Charges Filed In Death Of Serviceman

Lawton, Okla. (AP) — Second-degree murder charges were filed here Monday against two Ft. Sill soldiers in connection with the beating death of another soldier, authorities reported.
Charged were Muriel Jessie Brown, 25, Oklahoma City, and Roy Lamonte Bowman, 33, Baltimore. They were accused in the death of Pvt. Michael John Perkins, 18, of Omaha, Neb.
Special District Court Judge

David Carter set bond at $25,000 each and the men were being held in the Comanche County jail in lieu of bond.
A preliminary hearing was scheduled for March 29.
The victim's body was found Feb. 16 in the nearby Wichita Mountains Wildlife Refuge. Authorities said he had apparently been beaten with a walking stick, which was recovered, and a metal tool of some type.

Air Service Probe Backed

Omaha (AP) — North Central Air Lines has won the support of the Omaha Airport Authority for an investigation of the quality of air transportation between Eppley Airfield and Texas.

However, the authority stopped short of backing North Central's request that it be authorized to operate nonstop and with stops at Kansas City between Omaha and Dallas-Fort Worth.
A document filed with the CAB in Washington by the authority urged that the agency expand its Kansas City-Dallas-Fort Worth case to include the question of service between Omaha and Texas.
This would enable other airlines to enter the case with proposals to fly between Eppley in Omaha and Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Niger 'Reshuffled'

Namery, Niger (AP) — Niger's president, Lt. Col. Seyni Kountche, has reshuffled his government to include a majority of civilian ministers for the first time since he took power in a coup two years ago. He also gave up the portfolios of national defense and the interior.

-JUST ADD LOVE!
by ANN CROWLEY
START THE DAY WITH C
One of the bright spots in the long winter is the availability of fresh grapefruit. They are at the peak of their production in January and February.
Besides having a delightful refreshing taste, grapefruit are an excellent source of vitamin C. One medium size grapefruit supplies the body with its total requirement of ascorbic acid for a day. Vitamin C is utilized by the body in rebuilding tissue and wound healing. It may function in hydrogen ion transfer systems and aid in regulation of intercellular oxidation-reduction of potentials.
Vitamin C is not synthesized by the human body and is stored in only small amounts. Because of this characteristic, foods containing vitamin C should be eaten each day.
At the present time there is inadequate scientific evidence to justify massive doses of vitamin C. In studies where doses of 100 to 10 000 mg of vitamin C were given daily no beneficial results were observed in prevention of upper respiratory infections. Some evidence has been demonstrated that excessive doses of vitamin C over an extended period of time might be harmful.
Fresh grapefruit sections with fruit dressing is a most enjoyable method of achieving an adequate vitamin C intake.

The U.S. Postal Service seems to be biting the bullet and tightening its belt at the same time.

Concerned about its financial plight, the postal service is "taking very drastic economy steps," Clarence B. Gels, regional postmaster general from Chicago, said in Lincoln Tuesday.

Gels, director of the 13-state central region, said the Postal Service is now meeting expenses

Local Pharmacy Owner Charged In Drug Arrest

The owner of two Lincoln pharmacies has been charged in Lancaster County Court with delivering a controlled substance.

Police said Robert H. Gilmour, 52, of 1801 Pepper, was arrested about 8 p.m. Sunday evening as he turned over the drug to a 28-year-old woman in a house in north-central Lincoln.

The woman was not arrested. Police said they were withholding her identity to protect her.

The drug was identified in families are away from home weekends.

In another penny-pinching effort, the postal service encourages residents of new neighborhoods to lump mailboxes together on each block.

Delivery to a cluster of boxes rather than to the door of each house could drop the annual cost of delivery by $26 per household — from $58 a year to $32 — he said. Even delivery to the curb could save $16 a year per household, Gels said.

In Lincoln alone, where postal employees service 58,775 residences, such a move city-wide could save as much as $1.5 million a year.

Hiring Ban Told
Gels mentioned that local postal officials have been instructed to hire no additional people "unless absolutely necessary to deliver the mail" and certain "marginal" post offices will eventually be phased out.

In 1975, the Lincoln Post Office and Sectional Center sliced 65 payroll positions and cut costs locally by more than $400,000. Although the U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO) has recommended that 12,000 post offices across the country be closed for economy reasons, Gels said, "We don't plan any wholesale closings, whatsoever." He would not elaborate on which, if any, Nebraska offices may be closed.

He said he has asked Lincoln Postmaster Lowell Moore to evaluate the 130 post offices in southeast Nebraska and submit recommendations.

While there are no rigid criteria for determining which offices will be closed, Gels said decisions will be based on the number of customers now being served, the distance to another post office and whether or not a rural carrier is already serving patrons on either side of town.

Wages Not High
In response to a question about salaries, Gels said, "We do not feel wages are too high at all." He said postal employees are paid $11,800 to $14,250 a year for distribution and delivery services.

The postal service was plagued with "wildcat strikes," he said, before wages were brought up to scale with industry. There has been some demand for area wage scales, rather than a nationwide scale, he said, but added it is difficult to identify areas where costs of living are higher.

Gels said the postal service is being pressured by competition. Although the Independent Postal Service of America has made slight inroads in third-class mail service, United Parcel now does more parcel-post business than the U.S. Postal Service.

In other cost-cutting efforts, Gels said the postal service is considering installing more self-service postal stations, such as the hexagon on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus and the Gateway station.

Health Center Transfer In Works

The groundwork is laid, the paperwork finished and more than 14 documents are on their way to the federal government.

And if all goes well, the Lancaster County Board will take control of the Lincoln-Lancaster Mental Health Center in mid-April after more than a year of work.

The transfer to the county from the state Department of Public Institutions was mandated by state legislation two years ago, and April 16 is the deadline for change in control.

But the paper work, which transfers the federal grant from the state to the county, must first be approved by the Health, Education and Welfare Department in Kansas City and then in Washington, D.C.

"We've done so much long and careful work that it seems there should be no delay," said Commissioner Jan Gauger. "But there usually is," she admitted.

Contrary to some employee sentiment at the mental health center, the county commissioners are "not the bad guys," said Bob Clark, human services administrator.

The state called for the changeover. But it has been the county which has tried to protect the employee interests, he said.

Last year the County Board went to the Legislature with a bill which made sure that the employee retirement benefits were protected.

This year the county has been working for passage of a bill which would transfer employee benefits like sick days and vacation time.

Without the legislation, some mental health center employees will lose benefits from the state that are in excess of county benefits.

For example, state employees can accrue 180 days of sick leave; county employees, only 120 days. State employees also earn vacation time faster than county employees.

"If this bill doesn't pass, the county will have tried and failed. And the state didn't even try," Clark said.

Under the transfer, the mental health clinic will become a county-run operation and the current board of directors for the clinic will become an advisory group to the County Board.

Fireside Inn Request Delayed

A request for permission to sell beer on Sunday at the Fireside Inn, 640 W. Van Dorn, will be debated during a public hearing March 9.

The Lancaster County Board deferred action Tuesday on the request by T. Clement Gaughan for Sunday off-sale beer until after the hearing.

The board also approved a contract with Schwarck Quarries, Inc. for crushing rock at the Roca quarries on a 2 to 1 vote. Only Commissioner Bob Colin voted against the contract approval.

First Tourney Set

The contract approval ends a long battle with County Engineer Marv Nuernberger over who should get the rock crushing job.

Dorado, P.R. (UPI) — The first annual Dorado Beach-Cerromar Beach Pro-am golf tournament is set for March 27-April 1. Play will be on all four Trent Jones-designed courses at the adjacent resorts on Puerto Rico's north coast.

W. Lincoln School May Be Expanded

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education heard but took no action Tuesday night on a proposal to double the size of West Lincoln Elementary School, with some demolition possible beginning this summer.

Current 280-pupil enrollment at West Lincoln, 630 W. Dawes, is far beyond capacity, and area parents have requested relief. An architect's plan would add the equivalent of six classrooms and a media center in more than 8,000 square feet of additional space.

If the board were to approve the project, West Lincoln could accommodate 400 to 450 students, Supt. John Prasch said. Children now attend overflow classes in the existing media center, on the stage and in the gym.

The expansion plan would remove many existing interior walls and create three open classroom clusters. A new addition on the southwest corner of the building would serve grades 4 and 6. Walls on the northwest corner and east side would be moved outward, to accommodate primary grades.

More Additions Possible

The supplementary reading center would be located near the front entrance. The architect said it would be feasible to add another cluster on the west side later, if needed, and to close West Nance Street between N.W. 6th and N.W. 7th to expand the playground area.

The remodeling plan — building outward compactly around the existing building — would impinge minimally on school grounds and would also make air conditioning more practical, the board was told.

Demolition costs were estimated at $20,000 to $25,000. Prasch said less expensive accordion-type walls could be installed for teacher flexibility, and he recommended continuing to enroll West Lincoln area 6th-graders at Goodrich Junior High, "as long as parents are satisfied" with that arrangement.

Plans May Change

Prasch said West Lincoln teachers haven't yet responded to the remodeling proposals, and stressed that the plan may be changed.

In reports on other school construction projects, Prasch said the Northeast High School swimming pool, music rooms and gym are now in use. Exterior site work remains unfinished and the industrial arts shop won't be operational until fall.

Surfaces on two of the three new gym floors in the Northeast addition are too abrasive, Prasch said, explaining he'll seek remedies from contractors. Expansion of tennis courts and parking are possible later if funds are available.

At the new Hill Elementary, Prasch said landscaping, fences and rear sidewalks will be installed this summer. The Lincoln High School remodeling continues to move too slowly, he said, and a labor dispute at the Irving Junior High addition site has moved into an "uneasy truce."

Delays Expected

Crews are currently working at Irving, but at different times. Good weather has helped progress, Prasch said, but that might be "shortlived," and he expects work "stoppages and arguments later on" when joint work shifts are required.

Prasch said he'll present to the board in March a new policy on naming schools. Special committees with public participation would be continued, but the policy would prohibit renaming schools, and discourage naming portions of existing buildings, such as gyms or libraries.

Staff Levels Important

Without going into specifics, Prasch reminded the board that 80% of the district budget goes for salaries; thus, staff levels to be determined will set major dollar needs.

The board on March 9 will consider shifting guidelines for setting building staff numbers, which Prasch acknowledged may result in a slight increase from the current total, about 1,500.

Prasch reported requests for more school psychologists, and teachers of the trainable mentally retarded located at buildings instead of traveling to serve several. Yet the district is currently overstaffed because of negotiated adjustments after the 1975-76 budget was set.

Prasch warned against pork-barrel temptations in certain areas. He said the concept of allowing school buildings to request staff needs is sound, but urged the board to avoid what would in some cases result in automatic program changes if all requests were granted.

GOV. AND MRS. EXON . . . meet OAS Secretary General Alejandro Orfila.

Exon Motion Delays Natural Gas Proposal

Washington (UPI) — The National Governors' Conference voted Tuesday to delay consideration of a committee-backed proposal endorsing deregulation of new natural gas prices.

The action came after a spirited debate in the closing session of the governors' mid-winter session here.

Under the motion by Gov. J. James Exon of Nebraska, further consideration of the proposal was put off until the governors' summer meeting this year.

The resolution, placed before the body by Gov. Thomas P. Salmon of Vermont, chairman of the Natural Resources and Environmental Management Committee, called for Congress to enact a phased process whereby deregulation would not affect contracts already in force.

Gov. Brendan Byrne of New Jersey said the governors needed more information before passing such a measure; Gov. Calvin Rampton of Utah said he was opposed to the partial deregulation; Gov. Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts called the resolution "unwise," and Gov. Philip Noel of Rhode Island said the debate pointed up the failure of the nation to come to grips with energy issues.

Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota said he was opposed to deregulation.

But Gov. David L. Boren of Oklahoma called the issue very pertinent and said it was imperative the governors express themselves, calling the resolution "a sound and moderate proposal."

"I don't think we should sit back and let the crisis get worse," Boren said.

However, after a close voice vote, a show of hands was called and 13 governors voted for tabling the measure, the exact number required under the governing rules.

New Rumbling In South Salt Creek

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

There's a new rumbling in the South Salt Creek Community.

For years, trains from three different railroad companies have been rumbling through the area which is roughly bounded by O St. on the North, 9th St. on the east, Van Dorn on the south and Salt Creek on the west.

Now, the citizens of that area are rumbling, through the voice of the South Salt Creek Community Organization.

More than 60 people attended the regular meeting of the SSCCO Tuesday night to hear a proposal from John Longsdorf of the Railroad Traffic Safety District explain a series of proposals designed to "improve, separate or remove 72 of the 404 railroad crossing which dot Lancaster County."

The proposals are part of a project which has earned Lincoln the title of a "pilot project city," Longsdorf explained, and will include the possible construction of at least six viaducts and the consolidation of miles of track to "completely remove the hazard of railroad traffic through the city."

That "consolidation" is what most concerns the SSCCO people, according to a very vocal protest which lasted nearly two hours. It would mean the removal of the tracks which run down 4th St. and the building of a double track on 3rd St. to handle a projected 40 trains a day to meet a coal contract with large interests in St. Louis, Longsdorf said.

Plans call for the construction of a viaduct on A Street to handle two lanes of traffic at a projected cost of $3500 per lineal foot, Longsdorf explained. The viaduct would be open for access underneath, and a fence would be built alongside the tracks as an added safety factor.

This plan is still pending an environmental impact hearing, and that's the place Longsdorf would like to see the input from the residents recorded. He emphasized that a St. Louis firm is doing the impact study and that he could insure no input to the report or access to the records, of same until such a hearing.

Longsdorf said that "The trains are going to be there in that projected quantity whether we do anything or not." He added that his group is powerless to dictate the railroad's business, saying that "we can only try to work out a feasible solution for all parties concerned."

No date has been set for the environmental impact hearing.

American history. You're looking at it.

Available in blue or black

In 1804, two men climbed a hill in what was to become southeastern Nebraska and made us a part of history.

They were members of the Lewis and Clark expedition and the broad expanse of waving prairie grass that stretched before them would become Lancaster County.

Now, this and other events are recounted on the back of a handsome plate celebrating our nation's first 200 years. Pictured on the front is Lincoln's old City Hall, erected in 1879.

This special commemorative plate is available to everyone exclusively from Citizens State Bank for $4.95. Or just $2.95 with a savings deposit of $250 or more to a new or existing account.

One dollar from the sale of every plate will be donated to the Lancaster County Bicentennial Committee.

Stop in now at our University Place or Bethany office and take home a piece of history. The Lancaster County bicentennial plate, only from Citizens State Bank.

Contract On HUD Building To Be Awarded In Month

A federal official said Tuesday it will take about 30 days to determine whether a contract to build low income housing in Lincoln is awarded to the Lincoln Housing Authority or a private homebuilder.

Dick Koch, of the Omaha area office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), said he has received 15 proposals to build units in a 16-county area. Lancaster County is located in that region.

The housing authority has applied to build a 90-unit complex for the low income elderly at Haverford and L St.

However, several private developers also have applied under HUD's Section 8 housing assistance payment program.

Koch said HUD can award up to 225 new units in the 16-county area. Lancaster County has been designated to receive 100 units.

Housing Authority Executive Director Dick Burke said he believes Lancaster County may be awarded extra units because "there isn't much interest in the other counties, so we may be consolidated."

However, Koch reported HUD did receive applications from outside Lancaster County and dismissed Burke's statement that additional units will be given to the Lincoln area.

Koch said he didn't know how many of the 15 proposals he received for the 16-county area came from Lancaster County.

Since the HUD program allows both public agencies and private developers to compete in the program, Koch explained that no priority will be given the housing authority over the homebuilders. The applications will be "judged on their merits," he said.

It will take almost a month to evaluate the applications because his office received a total of 52 requests for the entire state.

The deadline for submitting the applications was Monday.

Castro's Sister Denounces Regime

By TOM COOK

Outstate Nebraska Bureau
York — Juanita Castro, sister of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, denounced her brother's regime in Cuba and viciously attacked the U.S. foreign policy of détente here Tuesday night.

"Cuba is a military Soviet base directed against freedom in the United States," she said. "He (Fidel) will never give up his aggressive plans because it is in his very nature."

Miss Castro spoke in broken English, but her message to members of the York Chamber of Commerce at their annual meeting that the face of communism has not changed was delivered firmly.

"People in Cuba have no freedom, no equality and no justice," Miss Castro said.

Thousands of Cubans are being held as political prisoners in Cuba, according to Miss Castro, but Cuban exiles in the U.S. have not given up hope of freeing them from their bondage.

She attacked "the Kissinger-Nixon-Ford détente" which she believes is undermining democracy throughout the western hemisphere.

"Cuba suffers the worst tyranny this hemisphere has ever known... yet countries bow down and ask for Fidel's friendship," she said.

The Cuban population in this country is grateful to the U.S. for accepting them, she said, but Cubans believe a change in leadership in the U.S. is necessary to avert world communism.

Miss Bailey Chosen

Washington (AP) — President Ford nominated Texas legislator Kay Bailey to a three-year term on the National Transportation Safety Board and said he will name her vice-chairman of the panel. Miss Bailey, 32, of Houston, will be paid $30,900 annually in the job.

"Those who never lived under terror can't understand what must be done to avoid the executioner," Miss Castro said.

North Platte Incumbents All Returned

Lincoln Star Special

North Platte — All three incumbents were returned to their Lincoln County commissioner posts in a recall election held Tuesday.

Unofficial returns in District 1 show Jerold W. Calhoun, Republican, polled 1,495 votes while his opponent, G. Everett Troyer, Democrat, received 504.

In the District 2 race, Leo W. Gutierrez, D., received 1,170 votes, with Raymond L. Hughes, R., getting 407.

William Dymond, R., was winner in the District 3 race, with 2,145 votes, compared to 695 for his opponent Teddy A. Thayer, D.

The special election was the result of a recall petition movement started by a group of county residents who said they felt the county board had adopted an unsatisfactory stand on land use regulations.

Wymore Nixes School Project

Lincoln Star Special
Wymore — A $650,000 bond issue for a new Wymore Southern School District gymnasium-music complex was soundly defeated by voters in a special election Tuesday.

The unofficial tally showed 467 in favor of the proposal, compared to 631 against.

Three years ago the voters turned down a bond issue for a similar facility plus a complete kindergarten through 12th grade building with a $2.5 million price tag.

Downed Line Causes Outage In NE Lincoln

A downed 8,320-volt line at 70th and Holdrege Sts. caused a power failure in northeast Lincoln that lasted about two hours Tuesday evening.

Power was out in an area from about 56th to 70th Sts. and from Aylesworth Ave. to Y St.

According to a Lincoln Electric System spokesman, LES first heard of the outage at about 6:30 p.m. Power was restored by 8:20 p.m.

The line could have been weakened or jarred loose after Friday night's storm, the spokesman said.

Three Sessions Set To Choose Bayh Delegates

Prospective delegate candidates supporting Sen. Birch Bayh for the Democratic presidential nomination will be interviewed at three Nebraska meetings Sunday.

Sessions will be held in Lincoln, Omaha and Hastings. The Lincoln meeting is scheduled for the Unitarian Church at 2 p.m.

Persons unable to attend one of the meetings should contact Bayh's Nebraska campaign chairman, Charles Pallesen Jr., 2727 Royal Court, Lincoln.

High Court Asked To Limit Challenge Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — State law enforcement authorities asked the Supreme Court Tuesday to limit the right of prisoners to challenge their convictions on grounds the evidence against them was illegally obtained.

The court heard arguments on appeals by Nebraska and California officials from decisions of federal appellate courts overturning the murder convictions of two men.

Attorneys for the two states said federal judges should be stripped of their power to overturn state convictions on grounds that evidence was obtained unconstitutionally.

The high court ruled in 1969 that federal courts have this power under a 109-year-old federal law authorizing them to free any state prisoner being unconstitutionally held.

David L. Rice

The justices are expected to rule on the two cases by the end of their current term, probably in June.

Arguments were heard first in the case of David L. Rice, convicted of planting a dynamite bomb in a suitcase which exploded in the doorway of an Omaha, Neb. house in 1970 killing police officer Larry D. Minard.

Rice's conviction was upheld in state courts despite his argument that police who found dynamite in his house did not have a valid search warrant.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis accepted his claim and overturned the conviction.

"If we are to believe the record, the man who set the booby trap is trying to go scott free because of the deficiency of the warrant," Chief Justice Warren E. Burger observed.

Rice is still in prison, serving a life term while the case is being appealed.

The defendant in the California case, Lloyd Charles Powell, is on parole. His case has been in the courts seven and one-half years.

Powell was arrested in Henderson, Nev., under a vagrancy ordinance. Searching him, police found a pistol which evidence showed had been used in the fatal shooting of Mary Parsons 10 hours earlier at a San Bernardino, Calif. liquor store.

Powell was convicted and state courts ruled that the pistol was admissible evidence against him. Later, the Henderson vagrancy ordinance was ruled unconstitutional. On this basis, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco struck down the conviction.

In both cases the federal courts acted under their power to issue writs of habeas corpus, requiring state authorities either to release prisoners or grant a new trial because of constitutional violations.

Powell's court appointed attorney, Robert W. Peterson of Santa Clara, Calif., said the officer who arrested Powell should have known the ordinance was unconstitutional.

"He just saw somebody walking in a shopping center and thought that he was a suspicious person," Peterson told the court.

Robert R. Granucci, deputy California attorney general, said federal courts had no right to "punish California by freeing a California murderer" because the Henderson ordinance had been found unconstitutional.

"This is not a vagrancy case," he told the court. "This is a murder case."

Granucci argued that claims of unconstitutional search and seizure should not be allowed to be raised in habeas corpus proceedings in federal court after they have been rejected in state courts.

But if the court does not choose to go this far, he said, it should at least prohibit habeas corpus review of searches "made in reasonable and good faith reliance on a coordinate branch of government."

Asst. Atty. General Melvin Kammerlohr of Nebraska took a similar position, arguing that "in general ... if the officers are acting in good faith, the exclusionary rule serves no purpose."

The exclusionary rule, barring illegally seized evidence from use in criminal trials, is designed to discourage police misconduct.

Rice's attorney, William C. Cunningham of Santa Barbara, Calif., argued that federal court are "better circumstanced" than state courts to review claims of constitutional violations.

Former Prisoner Release Official Gets Prison Term

Omaha (UPI) — A former prisoner release project coordinator for the Nebraska Urban League was sentenced to a 15- to 45-year term Monday in the Nebraska Penal Complex for being a habitual criminal.

Douglas County District Judge Samuel Caniglia rejected a claim by Clifford H. Davis, 45, that he was framed by police narcotics officers during a raid at his apartment last October.

Davis said he would appeal the sentence and his conviction to the State Supreme Court.

Davis contended police planted heroin and other drugs at the apartment prior to the raid. He told Caniglia, "I know because I'm an ex-con that I would be railroaded into the pen."

Davis said he had made contact with the alleged informant involved in the investigation leading to the raid, and the informant denied ever having seen Davis or of knowing him.

Sgt. Dennis Howard, head of the police division's night narcotics unit, said Davis' allegation was "an absurd accusation."

"It isn't true," Howard said, "and the court and the jury didn't buy it either."

Davis was found guilty on three felony charges in January, including possession of heroin with intent to deliver, possession of a controlled substance and possession of a firearm by a felon.

The prosecution presented evidence during the trial that Davis had two felony convictions on breaking and entering charges. The prosecution said Davis received a one-year term on a 1949 conviction in Omaha and 10 years in Iowa on a conviction in Council Bluffs in 1950.

Tech College Wins Legal Battle

Alliance (AP) — For the second time in as many months, the Western Nebraska Technical Community College Area has won a legal battle with county officials withholding funds collected to support the school.

Box Butte County District Court Judge Robert Moran Tuesday ordered Box Butte County officials to give the funds to the school.

The $51,568.53 was turned over to the area treasurer immediately after the brief hearing, and County Atty. Paul Empson told Moran that he does not think the county will appeal the decision.

"It seems to me there's nothing to be gained," said Empson.

However, the funding plan for the state's technical community colleges is already docketed in an appeal to the Nebraska Supreme Court. That case involves Sheridan County, which turned over funds collected for the college last month after a similar ruling by Moran.

Dawes County officials have also withheld monetary support, and Moran will hear their case Wednesday.

At issue is a 1975 law permitting counties to levy a property tax of up to 2.5 mills for support of technical community college area.

The previous law on the subject was ruled unconstitutional by the state's high court, which said it violated the so-called "Duis Amendment" to the state constitution. The amendment makes it illegal to levy a state-wide property tax to support state institutions.

Opponents of the new method claim that new law is as unconstitutional as the old one. They claim that post-secondary education is the responsibility of the state, and that as such, it should be the funding responsibility of the state through the regular means used to support other state agencies.

Central Tech Division Realigned

Grand Island (UPI) — The Central Technical Community College Area Board of Governors has approved a new administrative alignment to divide its community education activities into three regions.

Dr. Chester Gausman, CTCGA president, said instead of administering the community education through the area's Grand Island headquarters, three regional offices in Hastings, Columbus and Grand Island will be established.

Gausman said the chief regional administrators will be those persons who have overall charge of campuses in Hastings and Columbus and the Grand Island Community Education Center.

Prior to the board's approval Monday night, Gausman said the regional setup would "better serve communities in the area."

The board approved joining other technical community college areas in the state in disapproval of legal test of LB344, approved by the 1975 Unicameral and signed into law as the current operational statute for community colleges.

The constitutionality of the law is being tested in a series of suits filed in the Western Technical Community College Area.

The board also approved several personnel status changes accompanying the new community educational alignment and administrative reorganization at Central Technical Community College in Hastings.

The board refused to accept the resignation of Harold Hughes as chairman of the agricultural division at Hastings. A board spokesman said the action was taken in disapproval of Hughes' breaking his contract and resigning to enter private business with an irrigation firm.

In addition, the board approved retaining a Grand Island law firm as its legal counsel to replace DeWayne Wolf of Kearney who was recently named a Buffalo County District Judge.

Lynch Plant Schedule Is Off—NPPD

Columbus (AP) — The Nebraska Public Power District's (NPPD) proposed hydroelectric pump storage plant near Lynch is way behind schedule, and the district is going to need more time to finish a preliminary study on the plant.

Ron Bogus, NPPD's public information supervisor, said project engineers can't meet the Oct. 1 date when the district's permit for the study expires.

Consequently, Bogus said, the NPPD Board of Directors will be asked to apply to the Federal Power Commission for a permit extension.

Plans call for the construction of a $283 million plant, which would be the first of its kind in the state. The plant would generate more electricity than either the Cooper Nuclear Station near Brownville or the Gerald Gentleman Station, which is now under construction near Sutherland.

According to Bogus, original plans called for the filing of an application for a license to build the Lynch Station by the end of 1975.

Suit Seeks Halt To Twin Loups Water Project

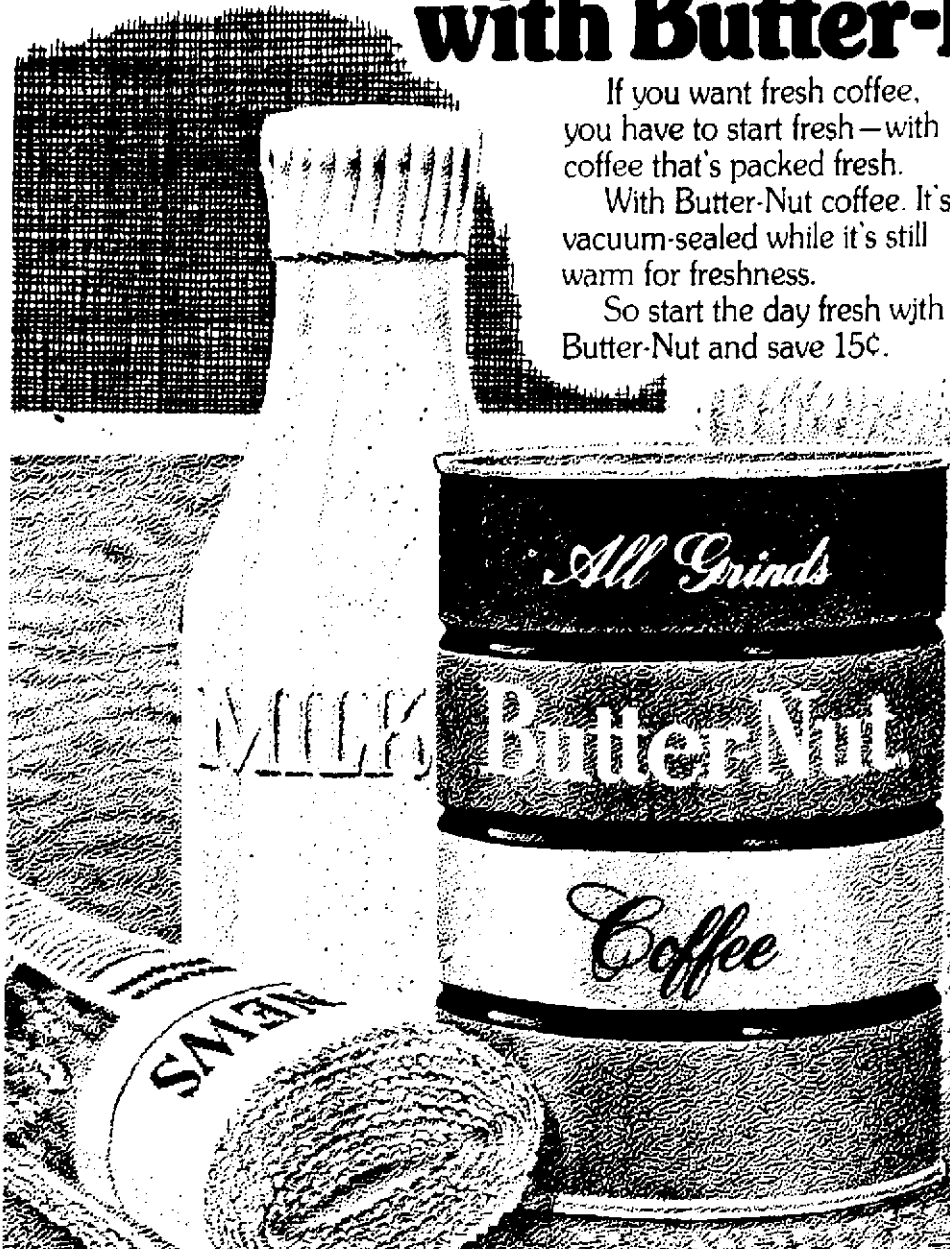

St. Paul (AP) — A suit has been filed in Howard County District Court in St. Paul seeking to halt progress of the proposed Twin Loups Reclamation District.

The suit was filed against directors of the district and their attorney, Cyril P. Shaughnessy, on behalf of Lloyd A. Geweke, Eldon Foth and Rollie Staab, who described themselves as residents, landowners and taxpayers of the Twin Loups district.

The suit, filed Monday, said the district directors are attempting to negotiate contracts with the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation, construction of water impoundment areas, irrigation canals, and lateral and collateral irrigation systems.

The suit said the district directors do not have legal authority to enter into contracts, and that if not restrained, the plaintiffs will suffer "irreparable injury."

YOUR FOOD GUIDE*

Here is the first in a five-part weekly series on Food for Fitness — a Daily Food Guide. It explains our need for different nutrients. The Basic Four Food Groups, briefly outlined here, will be fully detailed in four subsequent columns in Safeway ads. We suggest you clip this series to keep handy for nutritional meal planning.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

- Each day our food should supply us with many different nutrients.
- Protein for growth and to repair the body.
- Minerals and vitamins for growth and to keep the body functioning properly.
- Fat and carbohydrates for energy.

Most foods contain more than one nutrient, but no single food contains all the nutrients in the amounts needed. Thus, we need a variety of foods each day.

This Food Guide shows one way to choose foods which supply each of the four food groups. The food groups are sorted into groups. Choose within groups are wide enough to allow for a variety of foods.

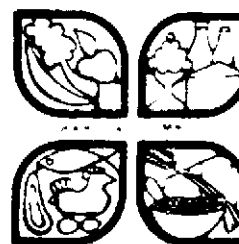

Select the main part of a meal from the four food groups. Add other foods as needed to make meals more appealing.

Some pointers to guide you in using this plan:

Choose at least the minimum number of servings from each of the four food groups. Servings may differ. For example, a child's serving of meat is smaller than an adult's. Pregnant and nursing women also require more food from these groups. Make lists with each group according to suggestions given. Foods within each group are similar, but not identical in food value. These food groups are not intended to replace the food groups in the Basic Four Food Guide. These food groups are intended to be used as a guide to help you choose foods that are healthy and delicious. They are not intended to replace the food groups in the Basic Four Food Guide.

OTHER FOODS

Some food nutrients and their energy value are almost entirely missing from the four food groups. Such foods include sugary butter, margarine, shortening. These items are not intended to be eaten as a meal, but rather as a snack or dessert. They should be eaten in moderation. They are not intended to replace the food groups in the Basic Four Food Guide.

HELPING YOU SELECT MEAT & PRODUCE

Whether you handle the big responsibility of a home and family or a business career (or both), time is a precious commodity to you. Safeway people are ready to help you save time in many ways.

MEAL PLANNING FOR WORKING WOMEN

Whether you handle machines inside or outside the home, we've lots of great foods to help you whip up some delicious meals. You'll like our variety and low prices. At times, we'll also offer free recipes to lend a hand.

Judiciary Committee Eyes Juvenile Justice Money

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

After a month-long waiting game among state officials, the Legislature's Judiciary Committee Tuesday indicated it may take the initiative to secure $500,000 in federal money to start a juvenile justice program.

A motion by Sen. Ernest Chambers to draft a bill to enable the state to receive the funds was left pending until Gov. J. James Exon's intentions on the subject are clear.

Without some statement of intent from the state shortly, federal officials have indicated they will assume the state, through its silence, does not wish to participate.

Sen. William Nichol of Scottsbluff said, "I don't want to see these funds go down the drain."

Strings Attached

Along with the federal funds would come some strings, including regulations on segregating juvenile offenders from adult offenders in jails. Fiscal analysts have estimated state and local governments would have to spend $1 million to meet the standards.

Judiciary Committee members were apparently unaware of action taken Monday by the Appropriations Committee suggesting to the State Crime Commission that the state not adopt the juvenile justice program.

Committee staff members were directed to check to see if Gov. J. James Exon still intends to introduce a bill on the subject.

In other action, the committee killed seven bills and advanced four to the legislative floor.

Taser Outlawed

Those advanced included Sen. Ernest Chambers' LB963 which would outlaw the sale and possession of an electronic dart gun known as the Taser. The twin darts, which deliver 50,000 volts, were labeled as inhumane by Chambers.

He said they constituted a danger to persons with heart trouble and added that people owning them would have a greater propensity to use them since they are considered non-lethal.

Chambers said he is not aware of any being used in Nebraska.

The committee also amended and advanced Sen. Loran Schmit's LB926 another in a series dealing with delinquent child support payments. Schmit's bill would create a presumption of contempt of court for any person 30 days in arrears on child support payments. It would also give the courts access to the State Department of Revenue's income tax records.

Person Presumed Guilty

Concern was expressed that the bill switches the burden of proof so that a person is presumed guilty until proven innocent.

Committee members killed another Schmit bill, LB942, which allows judges greater discretion in establishing bonds. Committee members Chambers and Roland Luedtke led the opposition, saying the principal beneficiaries of the bill might turn out to be bail bondsmen.

Among other bills killed were ones increasing penalties for bad checks (LB895), allowing police to take drivers' licenses to ensure traffic violators show up in court (LB892) and permitting people arrested for drunken driving to be represented by an attorney.

Work Release Opinion Doesn't Satisfy Luedtke

Sen. Roland Luedtke, chairman of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee, Tuesday said he isn't satisfied with an attorney general's opinion on who has control of the state's inmate work release programs.

The opinion received Tuesday indicates a Judiciary Committee bill to transfer control of the program to the prison administration from the State Parole Board is unconstitutional.

Luedtke said, however, the opinion is "silent" on whether the Parole Board has exclusive control over such programs or can share it with the prison administration.

Committee members have indicated they do not consider work release a parole but merely a different level of custody within the prison administration's authority.

They have expressed misgivings about how the Parole Board has exercised this authority and have proposed the law specify the programs be administered by the prison administration.

Luedtke said he intends to follow up Tuesday's opinion with a request for further clarification.

The bill pending before the Legislature is LB639. The opinion questioning the bill's legality was written by Special Assistant Attorney General Paul W. Snyder.

Property Tax Relief Advances

By The Associated Press

After rejecting an amendment that would have trimmed the appropriation, state senators gave first round approval Tuesday to a bill that would provide $40 million for the state's personal property tax relief program.

The Appropriations Committee measure, LB684, was advanced on a 26-1 vote with Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis casting the only no vote.

Lewis had offered the amendment to trim the $40 million figure to $33 million. Lewis said the fund is now "the third largest expenditure in state government out of general fund (state tax) money."

"This has been the largest encroachment on tax dollars in the last four years," Lewis said.

Money from the fund is used to reimburse counties for the rebates they give those who pay personal property tax. The program primarily benefits those with business inventories, ranchers and farmers and others with considerable personal property.

The Lewis amendment was fought by Speaker Jules Burbach of Hartington and Sens. James Dickinson of Omaha, John DeCamp of Neligh and Cal Carsten of Avoca.

Lewis said that in 1971-72, Nebraskans were told the program would cost $28 million, but instead it will go to $50 million.

The Bellevue lawmaker had offered bills to the Revenue Committee that would have frozen the size of the fund, but the panel killed them.

Lewis said the program was unfair, taking 12 cents of every state level tax dollar for the personal property tax rebates.

He said the program "has more money going out in personal property tax relief than is coming in in corporate income taxes."

Burbach argued that the Legislature could never come up with a tax program that would be "100% equitable for every man, woman and child in the state." He also cited inflation as a cause of the program's growth.

Lewis was supported by Springfield Sen. Orval Keyes, who said Sarpy County pays $800,000 more into the fund than it gets back.

The bill also contains $12.6 million to support governmental subdivisions and $2 million to reimburse citizens for property taxes collected illegally for support of vocational technical schools.

Legislative Calendar Non-Degreed Teachers Ban Sent To Floor

By The Associated Press

The Education Committee advanced legislation to ban the hiring of non-degreed teachers in rural schools Tuesday, but held a pair of controversial technical community college bills.

Sent to the full Unicameral was LB833, Omaha Sen. Larry Stoney's measure to end the hiring of non-degreed teachers in Nebraska.

Non-degreed teachers currently employed in rural elementary schools could continue work as long as they complied with existing requirements about working toward a degree.

The panel held LBs 963 and 762 after hearing testimony both sides, but sources in the committee indicated the probable fate of both tech school measures would be death.

Gov. J. James Exon backs LB963, which requires that the top mill levy available for tech school area operations and construction be reduced from 2.5 to 2 mills.

Jon Oberg, the governor's budget analyst, emphasized that Exon's $13.4 million recommendation in state funds for the tech schools was dependant on lowering the mill levy ceiling.

Omaha Sen. Eugene Mahoney and several tech school administrators opposed the reduction, with Mahoney saying Exon may not realize the tech school system "is where the action is" in higher education.

Oberg said the governor's financing plan for tech schools represents an overall 16% hike in state-local funding, while James Underwood of the tech school area based in Grand Island said it was only a boost of 11%.

The other tech school bill is LB762, Milligan Sen. Richard Marech's effort to separate Lincoln-Lancaster county from the rest of the Southeast Tech area.

Marech said rural taxpayers shouldn't have to pay for urban-oriented programs authorized by a tech school board that is dominated by Lancaster County members.

Opposing the Marech bill was Dr. Robert Eicher, president of Southeast Tech, and a representative of the Tech School Advisory Council. Both said the bill would bring fragmentation to the system.

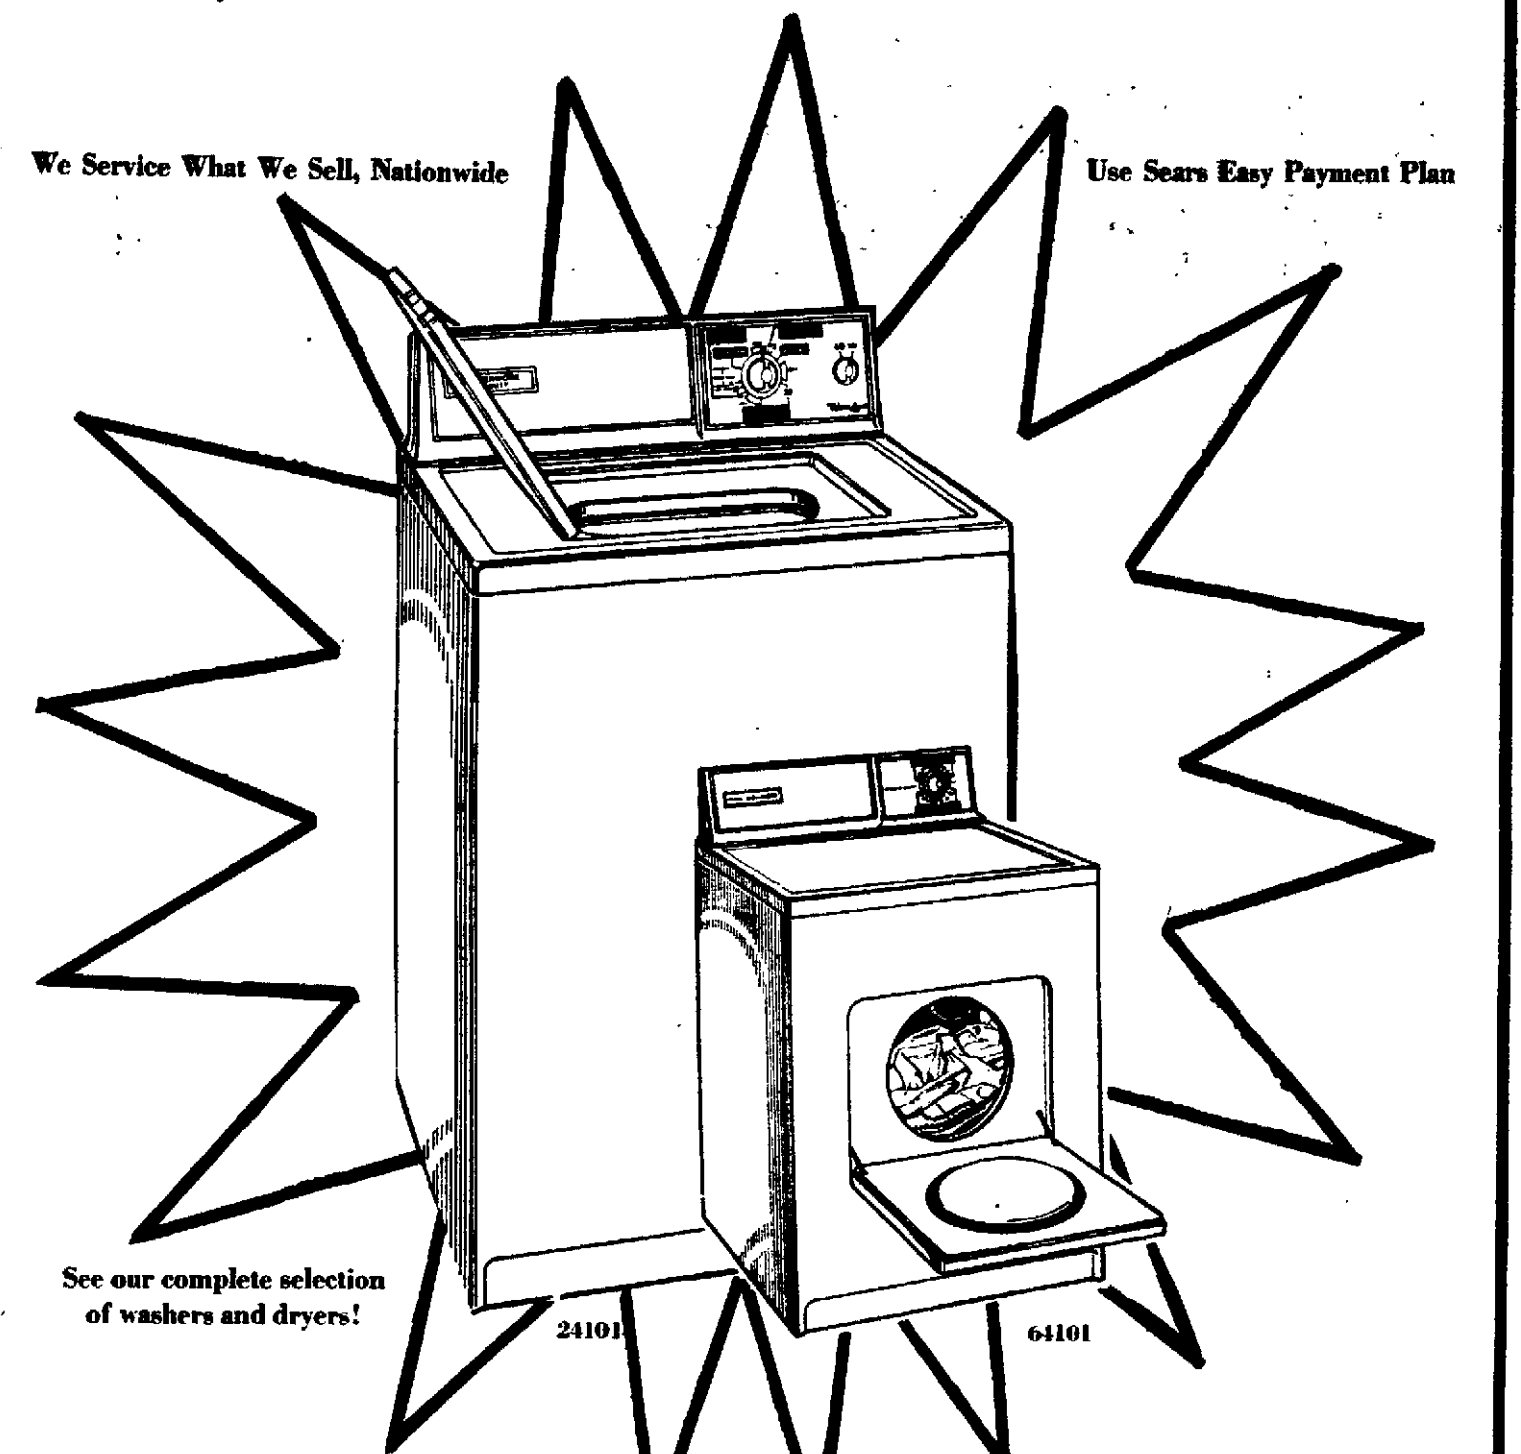

In other action, the panel advanced LB940, which provides for control of weeds on educational lands; LB947, which allows the state board of education to obtain liability insurance, and LB995, which provides for a college of fine arts to run some existing programs at the University of Nebraska.

Fifth Hopeful Files For 7th District Seat

William Parsons of Omaha filed Tuesday with the secretary of state's office as the fifth candidate for the 7th District legislative seat.

Filing earlier for the post, from which Sen. William Skarda is retiring, were Pat Venditte, Fritz Stanek, Jake McCourt and Lawrence E. Barrett.

Biennial Sessions Left In Grave By Unicam

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature Tuesday gave a surprisingly strong vote of approval to continuing annual legislative sessions.

Lawmakers refused on an 11-33 vote to revive Gov. J. James Exon's proposal to seek another vote of the people on the issue.

Exon's bill, LB992, proposing a constitutional amendment to return to biennial sessions limited to 120 days, had been killed by the Constitutional Revision and Recreation Committee.

Arguing that the people should be allowed to decide the matter, Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha attempted to raise the measure from its committee graveyard. That effort required 30 affirmative votes.

Nebraskans approved annual sessions in 1970, and they began with the 1971 session.

The last biennial session lasted 165 days and wandered into September. Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln reminded his colleagues.

The movement to limited annual sessions (90 days in odd-numbered years; 60 days in even-numbered years) has resulted in fewer bills, fewer new laws and better consideration of legislative proposals, Luedtke said.

Exon would prefer biennial sessions because "the governor wants us hanging on a string... subject to his call," the senator declared.

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha said mative votes.

The bill proposes to take the Legislature "back to the old days... back to the horse and buggy age."

It is supported by those who want to "shackle and cripple" the Legislature, he said, and produce a Legislature "obedient to the governor."

Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg supported the bill, suggesting that annual sessions have led to "increased spending... just one more opportunity to ask for more money."

People want less government, Duis said.

Sen. George Syas of Omaha said annual sessions "haven't worked" because senators have failed to use restraint.

All five Lincoln senators voted against revival of the bill, but Lancaster County's sixth lawmaker, Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, supported it.

Here is the vote on Mahoney's motion to bring the bill to the floor.

For: DeCamp, Duis, Kennedy, Mahoney, Marvel, Rumery, Savage, Stull, Syas, Warner, Wiltse.

Against: Barnett, Bereuter, Burbach, Burrows, Carsten, Cavanaugh, Chambers, Clark, Dickinson, Dworak, Fitzgerald, Fowler, George, Goodrich, Hasebrook, Johnson, Kelly, Keyes, Kime, F. Lewis, Luedtke, Maresh, Marsh, Mills, Moylan, Murphy, Nichol, Rasmussen, Schmit, Simpson, Skarda, Stoney, Norwig.

Absent or Not Voting: Anderson, Cope, Koch, Kremer, R. Lewis

Malpractice Insurance Bill Advances To Floor

The Unicameral's Health and Welfare Committee Tuesday advanced a bill to allow physicians and hospitals to form their own malpractice insurance companies.

The bill, LB968, would allow formation of separate mutual insurance companies to write malpractice insurance, one for physicians and the other for hospitals.

During a hearing Monday on the bill, backers said the legislation would meet head-on the problems of increasing premiums and declining availability of coverage.

The measure drew support from the Nebraska Medical Association, the Nebraska Hospital Association and Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan. The bill was drafted at the request of Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh and incorporated provisions of another bill introduced by Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha.

The Cavanaugh bill would allow formation of an insurance company only for hospitals.

Also advanced were Omaha Sen. Harold Moylan's LB909 to allow druggists to substitute cheaper drugs for name brand drugs and Adams Sen. George Burrows' LB694.

LB694 provides a means for parents to appeal decisions resulting from an out-of-court settlement in the Beatrice State Home lawsuit to assign their children to either a community based program or to Beatrice. The settlement was aimed at decreasing the number of Beatrice patients.

Killed was a bill to require immunization of females against German measles, a cause of birth defects, prior to issuance of a marriage license. That measure, LB632, was sponsored by Sen. Gerald Koch of Halston.

Also killed were:
—LB830 sponsored Burrows to require financial reports of mental retardation regions.
—LB879 sponsored by Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Ufa to reorganize mental retardation regions.

Among other bills advanced were:

—LB978 sponsored by Gov. J. James Exon to change the name of the State Welfare Department to the Department of Human Resources.

—LB979 sponsored by the governor to change the name of the Beatrice State Home to the Beatrice State Development Center.

Vet College Bill Given 1st Approval

The Legislature Tuesday voted 32-1 preliminary approval to a bill that would appropriate $123,000 to place 10 additional Nebraska students in veterinary colleges.

The students would go to the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia and to Cornell University.

LB798 was introduced by the Legislature's Agriculture Committee.

Trouble Faces Supreme Court Revision Proposal

A proposed constitutional amendment to expand the size of the Nebraska Supreme Court from seven to nine members ran into trouble Tuesday and supporters asked for a delay before putting the proposal to a final vote.

Supporters need all but nine of the Unicameral's 49 votes to put the measure on the primary ballot for the voters. Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln got 17 votes in an unsuccessful attempt Tuesday to kill the bill. Barnett said the workload of the court did not justify the increase in judges.

Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh accused Barnett of lies and misinformation and asked that the final vote on LB817 be delayed until Thursday.

In the current seven-member court, three judges can uphold the constitutionality of a legislative act because five judges are needed to declare an act unconstitutional.

The nine-member court could find it easier to find the votes of five judges necessary to declare legislative acts unconstitutional.

South Sioux City Sen. John Murphy said the amendment would destroy the balance of power between the Supreme Court and the Legislature.

Gun-Toting Man Fined $100

A fifty-four-year-old Kurt Freiberg of Omaha was fined $100 Tuesday for carrying a pistol under his jacket at a legislative hearing.

Freiberg pleaded guilty to disturbing the peace Tuesday before Lancaster County Judge

Ralph Slocum.

Freiberg was hustled out of hearing on a bill to change the state's no-fault divorce law Monday afternoon by two State Patrol troopers after Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett spotted the gun, a .25-caliber automatic, beneath the man's coat.

Tuesday's other winner, Hebron, at 8 p.m. Thursday, while Monday's winners Geneva and Wilber face off at 6:15 at Fuhrer Fieldhouse.

The Bears, now 8-11, had to battle from behind to top 17-6 Meridian in the nightcap.

With the score tied 30-all at the end of the third quarter Meridian jumped into a lead when guard Mark Rohr hit a jumper and forward Gary Haake connected on four straight free throws to boost the Mustangs to a 36-32 lead, at 4:21.

Haake went to the line the next two times Meridian got the ball and hit three of four but the Bears' Scott Poppe hit three field goals and tied the game at 40-40 with a 2.44 left.

Jeff Marsh put Hebron into the lead for good at 2:13 when he drove for a layup and hit a free throw to put the Bears into a 43-40 lead.

"We were in trouble, with three players carrying four fouls and Meridian hitting at the free throw line," said Hebron coach Richard Fisher. "But our bench is strong and we held them with our man-to-man defense."

"We've beaten Tri-County by about 12 points in their Christmas tournament and then they beat us by 10 at home," said Fisher. "So we know what we're up against in the semifinals."

Upsets Aid
Poll Juggling

NEW YORK (UPI) — Another week of upsets caused more juggling among the top-ranked teams this week in the United Press International's Board of Coaches college basketball ratings.

The top three remained unchanged from a week ago, with Indiana continuing its stranglehold on the No. 1 spot. The Hoosiers received 37 first place votes and 406 points from the 41 coaches who participated in this week's balloting, with Marquette and North Carolina remaining in the Nos. 2 and 3 spots respectively.

Marquette managed to get three first place votes and North Carolina also got one, marking the second week in a row that Indiana failed to gain the unanimous support of the coaches as the No. 1 team.

Rutgers, Nevada-Las Vegas, Notre Dame and Alabama all improved their positions among the top 10 while UCLA, Maryland, Washington and Tennessee all fell in the rankings.

UCLA's upset at the hands of Oregon last Saturday night paved the way for Rutgers, Nevada-Las Vegas and Notre Dame to advance. Rutgers, unbeaten in 23 games, moved up one place to No. 4 and Nevada-Las Vegas, which has lost just once in 27 games, climbed one spot to No. 5 as UCLA, fourth a week ago, fell three places to No. 7.

Notre Dame made the biggest surge among the top 10, advancing four places to No. 6 after raising its record to 20-4. Maryland, seventh a week ago, dropped one place to No. 8 following a loss to Duke and Washington also slipped one notch to No. 9 despite winning both its contests during the week.

Alabama, which took over first place in the Southeastern Conference, advanced to No. 10, replacing SEC rival Tennessee in the select circle. Tennessee, ninth a week ago, fell three notches to No. 12 following a loss to Florida.

Michigan heads the second 10 for the third consecutive week and Missouri follows Tennessee in the No. 13 spot. St. John's (NY) moved up two places.

Ford Leads
No. Carolina
Past NC St.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Phil Ford made 16 consecutive free throws Tuesday night and helped the fourth-ranked Tar Heels' four-corner delay produce a 91-79 rout of No. 15 North Carolina State.

The triumph gave the Tar Heels the regular season championship in the Atlantic Coast Conference and the NCAA tournament bid that probably will go with it. They improved their record to 23-2 overall, 10-1 in the ACC. N.C. State dropped to 19-6 and 7-4.

The Tar Heels connected on 67 per cent of their first-half shots to gain a nine-point lead at the half.

State whittled the lead to six with 13 minutes left in the game and looked ready to comeback when both of the UNC big men, Tommy LaGarde and Mitch Kupchak, drew their fourth personal fouls.

With almost 13 minutes left to play, Coach Dean Smith ordered his team into the four-corner delay.

That put the onus on Ford to dribble the time away as his teammates spread out in a box formation. State was forced to foul the 6-foot-2 sophomore and Ford was unerring in his foul shots—despite the hoots and jeers of 12,400 fans.

The Wolfpack, meanwhile, committed five turnovers when it got the ball and let the game slip away.

Bankers, Snyder Gain Tourneys

Garland, — Bankers Life and Snyder Fiber Glass won championships here in the recently concluded Garland Basketball Tournament.

Bankers Life took the A division with a 121-67 victory over the Grand Island Pizza Hut. Snyder Fiber Glass stopped Jackson's Lounge of Garland, 89-80, for the Class B championship.

Bankers Life landed three players on the Class A all-tournament team, including Al Maxey, Sam Martin and Larry Segar. Paul Thomas and Glenn Mays from the Grand Island Pizza Hut also earned berths.

Maxey was the most valuable player.

In Class B, Jackson's Lounge's Tom Shaefer and Steve Carr won tournament positions as did Seward's Tom Knipple and Snyder Fiber Glass' John Strain and Tom Novak, who was also named most valuable player.

Kearney Hosts Mat Tourney

Kearney (UPI) — More than 60 wrestlers have been entered in the NAA District 11 tourney which will open at 1 p.m. Friday at Kearney State.

The second round will start at 3 p.m. and the finals at 7 p.m. Expected to enter are Chadron State, Concordia, Dana, Doane, Kearney State, Midland, Peru State and Wayne State.

Wayne State won the Nebraska College Conference championship and Midland won the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title last week.

Jack Ramey, tourney director, said some of the entrants could be wrestling for the National Championships at Edinboro (Pa.) State March 10-13.

Habitat Bill Receives OK

By United Press International
The Unicameral's Constitutional Revision and Recreation committee voted 7-0 Tuesday to advance a bill to create a $4 million statewide wildlife habitat acquisition and preservation program.

LB861, sponsored by Sen. Donald Dworak of Columbus, would finance the habitat program through a $7.50 habitat stamp and increases in hunting and fishing license fees.

The fee increases alone would raise $2.7 million and the rest of the money would come mostly from the federal government, according to the State Game and Parks Commission.

The Commission has proposed spending 20 per cent of the $4 million for land acquisition, 40 per cent for cost-sharing preservation programs handled through natural resource districts and the remainder to manage and maintain state lands.

The legislation has a Jan. 1, 1977, operative date.

Resident hunting fees would increase from $4.50 to $6.50 and fishing license fees would increase from $4 to $7.50. A combination license would cost $13.50 instead of $8.

Outdoor Report

A brief return to winter over the weekend apparently failed to halt the early migration of waterfowl into Nebraska, according to Game and Parks Commission men in the field.

Good numbers of ducks and geese are on hand in many parts of the southern half of the state, and many ducks and geese have also moved to the Missouri River in Northeast Nebraska. According to reports from the field, outdoor activity includes:

PANHANDLE: Ice fishing has ended, with officers reporting all lakes in the area closed.

SOUTHWEST: Fishermen have been taking some walleye to 4 pounds at the Canada Steam Plant near Lexington. New flights of waterfowl are apparent throughout the region. White-fronted geese have moved into Dawson and Gosper Counties, and many ducks and geese are using basins in Phelps County. Some Sand Hill cranes have been seen in the Overton area.

SOUTHEAST: Fishermen at Ford State Recreation Area near Central City have been doing well on crappie, herring, smallmouth bass, bluegill and sunfish. Fishermen in the Blue and Republican Rivers in Nuckolls and Thayer counties have been taking some catfish. Ducks and geese are on hand in many areas and Sand Hill cranes are showing up in the Grand Island area.

NORTHEAST: Snappers have been taking piddlerfish to 20 pounds in the Gavins Point Tailwaters, and their counterparts downstream on the Missouri River have been taking many varieties of fish to Dakota and Dixon counties. Snappers near Poncha have been getting 20-pound piddlerfish, along with occasional fathead catfish to 20 pounds, blue cats to 15 pounds, channel cats up to 8 pounds, and some carp and buffalo. Cedar County has become temporary quarters for a good number of migrating waterfowl, including Canada snow geese, blue geese, redheads, mallards, pintails, gadwall, wilsons and mergansers.

Editors Dust Off Old State Cage Records

PREP PICKS

by Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

when Farwell had only three players on the court."

Hastings Tribune sports editor Terry Henion mentions another 61-point scorer, who joins Dawson-Verdon's Bruhn, Henderson's Ron Regier and Omaha St. Joseph's Rich Lang at that single game plateau.

In 1964, according to Henion, Sumner's Ron Simmons scored 61 points against Hordville. Simmons went on to become a starting guard at Nebraska.

Although they didn't match Bruhn's astronomical point total, the following players have earned Player of the Week distinction:

Dave Griffin, Lincoln Southeast — Senior center set school scoring record of 37 points against Kearney, hitting 13 of 20 field goals and 11 of 13 free throws. Knights came from behind in fourth quarter to win, 59-50, as Griffin hit 20 in the period on 6 of 6 field goals and 8 of 8 free throws.

Mike McGee, Omaha North — Junior 6-4 1/2, matched Griffin with 37 points as Vikings topped Omaha Burke, 80-71, for first Metro Conference championship shot in at least 30 years Wednesday against Omaha Benson.

Doug Berks, Lincoln Northeast — Junior guard canned 10 of 14 free throws and added 4 of 4 free throws as Rockets upset second-ranked Lincoln Southeast, 66-58.

Mark Swanson, York — Senior guard earns his second award of the season for burning previously top-ranked Class B Ord for 25 points in Dukes' 66-54 upset at Ord.

Scott Krause, Lincoln Plus X — In Thunderbolts' 53-50 upset over Cozad, he scored team high 14 points and checked Haymakers' 6-5 center, Claude Berreckman, to eight points.

Greg Loy, Wilber — His 10-foot jump shot rolled around the rim and fell in after the buzzer sounded, ending the second overtime, to give Wilber 60-59 upset over Friend in first round of Class C-10 district tournament. He finished with 10 points.

Jack Mahler, Pender — Senior hit 12 of 21 field goals, scored 29 points, grabbed 8 rebounds and was credited with 4 assists in 80-67 win over Bancroft.

Steve Olson, Malcolm — Senior guard hit 21 points in team's 66-64 win over Waterloo. The week before, he had 13 in 61-59 upset win over Murdock.

Brian Wall, Hampton — Registered 10 field goals and hit 4 of 6 free throws as Hawks scored 74-65 triumph over Crossroads Conference power Gresham.

Larry Garland, Omaha — Despite 102-85 loss to Davenport, 5-8 sophomore guard was effective, blizzing the winners for 40 points on impressive assortment of long-range shots to layins.

Wyoming Crash Injuries Claim Alliance Woman

RAWLINS, Wyo. (AP) — The State Patrol issued a report on the death of a Nebraska woman Tuesday. The patrol said Alice A. Grau, 68, of Alliance, Neb., died earlier this month as the result of a Wyoming traffic accident.

The patrol said the accident occurred Jan. 8 about five miles east of the Elk Mountain Interchange on Interstate 80 between Rawlins and Laramie. The Grau woman died in St. Joseph's Hospital at Alliance Feb. 9 as a result of injuries suffered in the crash.

She was the driver of a car that went out of control on the icy road and collided with a semi-truck, the patrol said. The driver of the truck was not injured.

Putting Out Fire May Affect Life

Laramie, Wyo. (UPI) — A researcher at the University of Wyoming is trying to determine whether the suppression of natural forest fires affects life in streams and lakes.

Brian Shero, a UW doctoral candidate, wants to find out if the lack of fires affects the production of nutrients which flow into water systems.

Sunday Journal and Star

What do those "Join the Movement" billboard signs around town mean?

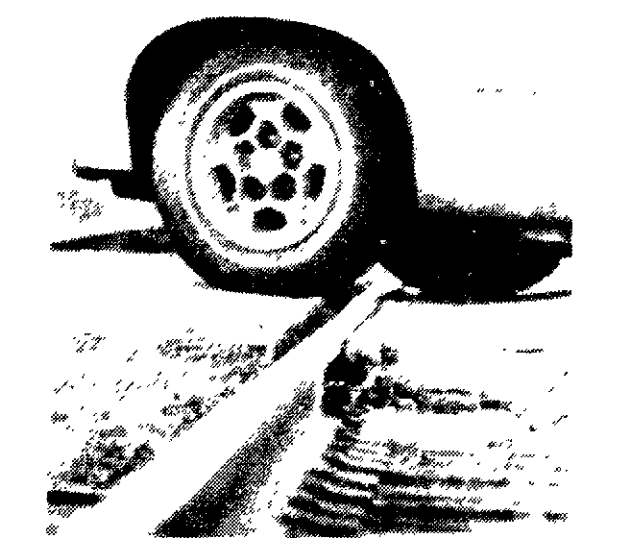

—Elmer E. Hansen, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The signs are part of a "teaser campaign" to advertise the National Bank of Commerce's move to its new building at 13th and O according to Rhonda Becker of Imperial Outdoor Advertising, Inc. She said the original signs had to be hastily covered when the opening of the new bank was delayed, but the second set was put up recently. One more set of the signs is planned as well as a "followup" set explaining the entire campaign.

Can anything be done about the awful bump at the railroad crossing at 19th and Q Sts.? The crossing of those tracks on O and P Streets also is a problem.

—All Shook Up, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The Rock Island Railroad is responsible for maintaining those crossings, according to Bob Oehring, head of the City Public Works Dept. However, since the railroad is in financial trouble, Oehring has asked for a legal opinion from the city attorney's office on how far the railroad's liability extends. It is possible that the city could repair the crossing and charge Rock Island for it, he said.

Why is it that drivers seem to have to stop at every traffic light on O St.? I thought that if you were driving the speed limit that you were supposed to make most of the lights. The way the lights are set now seems to cause a lot of unnecessary delays.

—Just Idling, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The city currently is working on a computer system that will reduce the number of stops motorists make at intersections with signals, according to City Traffic Engineer Bob Holsinger. Installation of a computer that eventually will control lights at all 208 intersections will begin in March in a building at 7th and Charleston Sts. The $3 million system will change the timing of lights to ease rush hour traffic and in response to heavy traffic periods, such as during the Christmas shopping season, State Fair, horse racing, and football games. During normal traffic periods, sensors imbedded in the streets will measure traffic flow and help reduce the number of lights at which drivers must stop. Among the first group of 35 intersections to be hooked up to the system are those on Cornhusker Highway, Vine and O to 70th, Capital Parkway to 40th, on 40th to Randolph and along Cotner Blvd.

My wife and I are planning a vacation in the Near East this summer and we'll be taking along some small electrical appliances, such as a razor and hair dryer. Will these gadgets work with foreign electric systems?

—J.H., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Most American appliances are made to run on 110 volts of electric power. In most Asian and European nations, the electric power is 220 volts, so you'll need a transformer if you plan to use your razor or hair dryer. The design of the American appliance's plug and foreign wall sockets usually aren't compatible, so some kind of adaptor also is needed for that reason. The transformers are available in Lincoln department stores.

ACTION TIP: Chicken, turkey, duck, goose and capon can all be valuable stretchers of the family food budget, especially when they can be purchased in quantity at sale prices. How to freeze poultry, both raw and cooked, is the subject of a new U.S. Agriculture Dept. booklet. For your copy of "How to Freeze Poultry and Poultry Main Dishes," send 50¢ to Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Cement Masons Union Ends Picketing At NBC

The settlement of a dispute between the J.R. Stelzer Co. and the Cement Masons Local 22 union ended picketing at the National Bank of Commerce job site at 13th and O Sts. late Tuesday morning.

The Local 22 began picketing the site Tuesday morning because of an alleged violation of fringe benefits payments by the Stelzer Co., a sandblasting contractor which sub-contracted work on the NBC building.

According to Jim Stelzer, owner of the Stelzer Co., payments of the benefits were made Tuesday afternoon.

Lance Johs, project manager for the Henry C. Beck Co. of Phoenix which is general contractor for the NBC building, said, since a settlement has been made, "work should be back to full strength Wednesday morning."

Declining to say how much time was lost due to the construction halt involving 150 workers, Johs said, "we'll make it up."

However, he added the Beck Co. will consult its attorneys about filing a suit against the Local 22 for an illegal secondary boycott.

According to Stelzer, an illegal secondary boycott may have occurred when picket signs went up at the NBC job site even though Stelzer's workers had not been employed there for about two weeks.

Jack Walls, business agent for Local 22, was not available for comment Tuesday.

Old Labor Union Attacks New One

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — One of the hottest issues to hit this area since civil rights is the violent, head-to-head clash of the old and the new in labor unions.

It began Jan. 15 with a commando-like assault in which one man was killed at a construction site.

The raid was mounted by AFL-CIO union men on members of the upstart American Federation of Unions (AFU) Local 102, which was formed in Baton Rouge, La., in 1971 and now has a foothold in this area.

Labor leaders say a significant challenge to traditional American Federation of Labor craft unions has been raised by the AFU which offers contractors cheaper rates and flexibility.

The struggle may go on for years and has nationwide implications.

The prospect of prolonged labor pains here makes some merchants and businessmen uneasy. They see themselves caught in the middle in pro-union country.

Thus far, 14 Calcasieu Parish grand jury indictments have been issued and a federal grand jury has joined the investigation.

The raid that touched off all this was staged by about 100 men, some armed with guns but most carrying clubs. They gathered outside the wire fence around the construction site where Jupiter Chemical Co. is building a plant beside the Calcasieu River.

Deputies said a stolen forklift truck, used as a tank, smashed through the gate and the attackers poured through onto about 14 men working at the site.

It was the second day of construction.

"The AFL's real gripe is we've got a union that is working," said Joe Fredericks of Baton Rouge, business agent for AFU Local 102. "We are exactly what contractors need. We are flexible, we have none of the jurisdictional disputes that keep the AFL all tore up."

The AFU is also cheaper. The scale is $8.31 an hour for every craft — bricklayer, carpenter, pipefitter, whatever. By contrast, an AFL pipefitter draws $10.85 an hour.

Flexibility means anybody in some 20 craft sections is free to do any line of work. AFL craft unions jealously guard their share of the job. Pipewelders, for instance, do not do ironworker welding, bricklayers do not help carpenters.

Contractors complain the rigidity causes complications. "Cheaper is not our big selling point, flexibility is," said Frederick. "Far as pay scales go, I know of seven AFL crafts that make less money than we make, and eight crafts that make more. Our scale is kind of in the middle."

Where the AFL has separate wage scales for each of its numerous building crafts, the AFU has just two wage categories. The other one for laborers: $4.57 an hour, plus 6 1/2 per cent in fringe benefits.

Frederick contends the AFL indirectly organized his new union by closing craft unions to workers "unless they had a lot of pull or a relative in the union."

"If there were lots of jobs around they would work you for years on a temporary permit, but they wouldn't sell you a (membership) book," he said. "And the permit man got treated like a stepchild, he got the mean jobs bookholders didn't want."

The AFU claims 2,700 members. Despite the "Local 102" in its title, there is no other local.

"The concept which they have is entirely incorrect," Victor Bussie, president of the state AFL-CIO, said of the AFU. "It takes a great deal more skill to do some work than it does others. And some people work a longer time, so that some crafts must be paid more than others because they don't work as long as others."

Bussie rejected Frederick's claim that AFL craft unions are a closed society, but said it was very difficult for anyone to get in without first passing through apprenticeship training because the unions must maintain a standard of skill.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 5 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 2. The result is your key number. Start at the letter with the key number of the opposite end and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
